All Men Over 38 Ordered Reclassified On Draft Roll

WMC Moves to Get More Registrants Into Farming; Old Class 4-H Abolished

The Selective Service classification 4-H, composed of men above 38 years of age, was ordered wiped out yesterday, and men in that group will be speedily reclassified into other existing classes.

While provisions were made in the new orders, announced by the War Manpower Commission, for deferment of farm workers above 38, the announcement said.

"Registrants who are reclassified out of Class 4-H and who have no cause for deferment other than age will be placed in Class 1-A and will be the first men over 38 inducted if and when the armed forces determine they can be used in the military establishment."

The men in 4-H are to be reclassified on the same basis as younger men, but with special "H" designations. Some will thus be put in 1-A (H), 2-B (H), 3-A (H) and similar classes.

The "H" designation denotes merely a subdivision of the particular draft class. Thus a man classified 1-A (H) actually would be in Class 1-A, although he would not be liable to immediate induction, like another man in that class lacking the additional (H) rating.

No More to Go In 4-H

A chief aim of the new order is to induct men over 38 to go into farming. The order provides that any man over 38 who farms now or who takes up farming by May 1 shall be reclassified promptly into farm deferment classes, 2-C if single, and 3-C if married, if he meets the other farm-deferment qualifications. Other men over 38 are to be put into the regular draft classifications "as soon as possible after May 1."

The announcement said:

"Those registrants who are reclassified out of Class 4-H and placed in Class 2-C or Class 3-C because of their agricultural occupation or endeavor prior to May 1 will be continued in those classes as long as they are necessary to agriculture if men over 38 are called for service. Other registrants reclassified after May 1 and placed in other classes will remain there, if men over 38 are called, only so long as men in their class would be deferred—as for example, normally not longer than six months if they are given a Class 2-A or Class 2-B deferment for occupation other than agriculture."

Manpower Crisis Involved

The new instructions, contained in amendments to Selective Service regulations, provide:

"No registrant shall hereafter be placed in Class 4-H. The classification of all such registrants now

Army Drafts 5605 Racing Pigeons For Message Duty

Chicago, March 7 (AP).—The Army draft whisked 5605 swift-flying pigeons off to war today.

The birds, some valued as high as $300 apiece and reputedly able to fly 1000 miles in two days, will be trained to carry messages from the battlefronts of the world.

Last night and today, members of the Chicago Racing Pigeon Association deposited crates of the birds in several depots established throughout the city. Later the crates were loaded onto express trucks, their immediate destination remaining a military secret.

Befriended Soldiers Praise Good Deeds of the Red Cross

HELMS DeSAVO LAUFER

By Roland Nicholson
Post Staff Writer

It was as sunny, but much colder, in front of The Post building at 4:30 p. m. yesterday as that day in December, down in Miami, Fla., when the major tragedy of his life came to P. F. C. Kirby L. Helms, 17, U. S. M. C. His mother died.

"I was home from Quantico on Christmas leave," the youngster told a reporter while Sunday afternoon theatergoers strolled by from the National Theater. "My furlough was up—I had to get back to camp."

Details, at such a time, don't quite get the attention they may deserve. But Private Helms didn't have to worry. He went to the Red Cross which immediately went through the necessary channels and secured an extension of leave for the bewildered boy.

The reporter went shopping again, this time stopped a soldier, Pvt. Harold Laufer, U. S. A., 20, stationed nearby. Did he have any particular reason for being grateful to the Red Cross?

"It certainly have," he replied. "It was early in January. I got a hurry call from New York that my mother was ill, had been removed to a hospital. I secured an emergency leave pass without difficulty, but I'd only been in the Army a short time. I hadn't had a payday, and I didn't have any money. I got in touch with the Red Cross and they fixed me up with all I needed." His mother, he said, is doing fine.

Seaman First Class John DeSavo, 30, of the Navy's Seabees, stationed at Camp Perry, Williamsburg, Va., and in town for a brief holiday, was the next customer.

"I was in Camp Allen, Norfolk, last Christmas. Things were pretty gloomy, being away from my home in Sparkill, N. Y., but along came a gift from the Red Cross chapter back home. The greeting card was

Kaiser to Testify

Formation of a Senate small business subcommittee to investigate "the supply lines of the home front," with Senator Maloney (Democrat) of Connecticut as chairman, was announced yesterday by Chairman Murray (Democrat) of Montana of the full committee. Senators Scrugham (Democrat) of Nevada and Taft (Republican) of Ohio were appointed subcommittee members.

Maloney asserted in a statement that the entire civilian supply picture is "a terribly serious one" which his committee will investigate thoroughly.

Kaiser to Appear

"The supply lines of the home front are of vital importance to the supply lines on the military front," he declared. "Our minimum essential civilian needs must be adequately planned for and fully met."

Other congressional activities shaped up to assure a news-worthy week on Capitol Hill.

The Senate War Investigating Committee has scheduled hearing today and tomorrow at which Henry J. Kaiser, Andrew Jackson Higgins and other shipbuilders will be questioned about the methods they use

Mme. Chiang Near Collapse At Wellesley

Emotion Almost Halts Her Speech At Alma Mater

By Edith Gaylord
Associated Press Staff Writer

Wellesley, Mass., March 7.—Overcome by the emotion of her return after 25 years to her alma mater, Mme. Chiang Kai-shek very nearly collapsed as she began a speech to the Wellesley student body today.

As her second sentence went out over the radio, the First Lady of China swayed and clung desperately to the lectern, her face drained of color. Her nurse held smelling salts under her nose and Mme. Chiang tried to resume speaking.

But once again she swayed and sagged, barely holding herself upright and gripping the lectern. This time, however, the smelling salts revived her and she went on to tell the undergraduates they need not be prominent individuals to help build a sane world.

The Wellesley honor graduate of 1917 told the girls to "beware of

Sub Torpedoes Low-Flying Plane Along With Ship

London, March 7 (AP).—The crew of a British submarine reports they "torpedoed" an enemy aircraft for a unique victory.

Submerged on Mediterranean patrol, Lieut. S. L. C. Maydon sighted an enemy supply ship escorted by three low-flying planes. Maydon ordered a torpedo fired. The result was a "magnificent column of orange and white smoke rising 1000 feet high."

Maydon then noted with astonishment that only two enemy planes were in sight. The third apparently had been caught by the explosion from the supply vessel and destroyed.

For Government Girls

Beauty, Happiness on $1440 A Year Will Be Clinic Theme

An Horatio Alger clinic for the Government girl—how to be happy though haggard, or beautiful though bumpy, and all on $1440 a year—moves into the bargain basements today at 8 p. m. for a four-night stand in the Department of Interior Auditorium.

And from all indications, the auditorium tonight is going to be jam-packed by girls who hang over their chairs in the wrong places or whose figures zig where they should zag. Not to mention girls who admire Dali-like hats but can't afford them, and still others who can't escape the fixation that somebody, sure as shooting, is going to do them dirt.

The beauty clinic is sponsored by the employe counselor section, Bureau of Ordnance, Navy Department, and the magazine Mademoiselle; it's for all Government girls, regardless of the agency for which they work, and it's free. The hope: That it'll help Government girls become better adjusted socially and, hence, more satisfied with their jobs.

The schedule:

Tonight—Career clinic. Speakers, Betsy Talbot Blackwell and Margaret Howser, of Mademoiselle, and May Brewster White of the War Manpower Commission.

Tuesday—Design for living. Speaker, T. H. Robsjohn-Gibbings, furniture designer and interior decorator.

Wednesday—Beauty clinic. Speakers, Ann Delafield, creator of the DuBarry reducing system, and Bernice Peck, beauty editor of Madamoiselle.

Friday—Fashion clinic. Speakers, Stanley Marcus, Dallas merchant; Kay Silver, fashion editor of Mademoiselle, and Lilly Dache, who needs no introduction. If you're a woman you know who she is; if you're a man, it doesn't matter.

'Health' Setup Raided Here In Vice Drive

11 Women, 1 Man Arrested; Massage Parlor Doubled as Call House, Police Say

By John Singerhoff,
Post Staff Writer

Eleven women were arrested here and one man was seized in New York City early yesterday in connection with the operation of what the Federal Bureau of Investigation called "the most notorious call house in the east."

Under the guise of an exclusive massage parlor the establishment catered, it was said, to prominent Capital figures. It was advertised in the telephone and city directories as the "Hopkins Institute" at 2701 Connecticut Avenue Northwest.

FBI agents with Detective Sergt. Roy Blick of the local police raided the place. They found two five-room apartments elaborately equipped as massage parlors and controlled, they said, by two Negro women in cooperation with the man.

Women Are Booked

Booked in Washington on charges of conspiring to violate the white slave traffic act, the women identified themselves as Mildred Powell Carter, 33, and Rose Anderson, 32, both Negroes, of 533 Twenty-first Street Northeast; Katherine Richards, 26, of 1173 Abbey Place Northeast; Katherine Parker, 26; Mildred Stevens, 24; Katherine Hensley, 28, all of 1647 Lamont Street Northwest; Wonder Posley, 21, of 1329 Belmont Street Northwest; Florence Dement, 32, of 2410 Twentieth Street Northwest; Helen Sanders, 32, of 2800 block Ontario Road Northwest; Irene Vinson, 30, of 2434 Sixteenth Street Northwest, and Anita Deis, 25, of 2100 N Street Northwest.

Nine of the women were released under bond early last night. Rose Anderson was freed under $5000 bond, while Mildred Stevens, Katherine Richards, Wonder Posley, Katherine Parker, Katherine Hensley, Irene Vinson, Helen Sanders and Florence Dement were released under $1500 bond each.

Called "Front" for Vice

The FBI identified the man only as F. Whitehead, 43, of New York City.

Raiders described the "Institute" as a "pseudo massage parlor" and said it was a "front" for a "most lucrative prostitution business." It was operated principally as a "call" agency for some of the better hotels, they said.

The girls, it was asserted, were imported from houses of ill-fame from New York to California, and were "beauties."

Detective Blick said the process worked as follows: A customer (and he had to be well recommended) would apply for a steam bath and a massage. The masseuses, he said, were women, a fact which violated a section of the District Code prohibiting the massaging of the opposite sex.

After receiving the massage, it was said, the client was informed there were "additional health-giving benefits" available. If he accepted, he was housed over night at the establishment in a room

Showdown

By Wes Gallagher
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, March 7.—Marshal Erwin Rommel's first two thrusts against Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's Eighth Army bounced off the British defenses in southern Tunisia in a welter of blood and twisted tank wreckage, but the Germans continued to press the attack throughout yesterday and today and there are no indications that the battle has ended.

Rommel failed to achieve the "surprise" he planned on Saturday in his first major attack against Montgomery since retreating nearly 2000 miles from Egypt and his rebuilt Africa Corps suffered "very heavy losses" in men and material.

Pichon No-Man's Land

At the same time the Anglo-American First Army snatched the initiative from Col. Gen. Jurgen von Arnim, at least temporarily, in northern Tunisia, with intense patrol activity which saw more than 100 prisoners captured.

Pichon, which American patrol forces occupied yesterday, now is in a sort of no-man's land as the German artillery is firing into the town from the hills to the north. Allied forces have withdrawn a mile west of Pichon but patrols go back and forth through the town itself.

At the other end of Tunisia, the violent fighting broke out yesterday when Rommel struck out with a heavy force from the hills south of the Mareth Line at dawn and later with a direct frontal assault by mixed German and Italian forces, but the Axis troops failed to dent the Eighth Army's position.

Eighth Army Was Ready

It was understood that the Africa Corps ran directly into a massed artillery barrage which left the battlefield littered with dying Germans and flaming tanks.

There were no late reports on the details of Rommel's losses, but in the very early stages of the battle the Germans lost 21 tanks,

Soviet Drive Perils Vyazma From 2 Sides

Reds Assaulting Staraya Russa, Orel, Germans Report

By the Associated Press

London, March 7.—Red troops enveloping Vyazma, last Nazi stronghold in the salient long pointed at Moscow, captured nearly 100 more localities today in a continuing offensive which cut down thousands of Germans, the Russians announced tonight.

To the northwest Marshal Timoshenko's troops striking against Staraya Russa, Nazi Sixteenth Army headquarters just below Lake Ilmen, stormed a strongly fortified town after a battle in which "hundreds of enemy dead and large quantities of arms were left on the battlefield."

Orel Assaulted, Nazis Say

The German high command admitted repeated Soviet assaults on the Staraya Russa defenses and acknowledged another withdrawal "according to plan" from the area of shattered Gzhatsk which the Russians took yesterday in their stride toward Vyazma, 35 miles to the southwest on the road to Smolensk.

Berlin also reported heavy Russian assaults on Orel, Nazi base linking the Central and Southern fronts, but the only mention by Moscow of that sector was the continuing Red army drive west of Sevsk to cut the Bryansk-Kiev railway. This maneuver also was

Armed Force Of 10,800,000 Held Justified

By Jack Bell
Associated Press Staff Writer

A special committee studying all phases of the manpower problem at the request of President Roosevelt was said in an authoritative quarter yesterday to be agreed that the present military goal—10,800,000 men in the armed forces by the end of this year—must be retained.

The committee was asked by the President to determine finally the number of men and women needed by the armed forces, industry and agriculture and to lay down a program to supply them.

It is headed by James F. Byrnes, Economic Stabilization Director. Other members are Bernard M. Baruch, chairman of the War Industries Board of the last war; Harry Hopkins, confidential assistant to the President; Admiral William D. Leahy, the President's military adviser, and Justice Samuel I. Rosenman of the New York Supreme Court, long a presidential aide.

Heavy bombers scored direct hits on the runaway of the Japanese airdrome at Gasmata, New Britain. Heavy units also bombed the airdrome at Cape Gloucester, New Britain.

Giraud Order Repudiates All Vichy Decrees

Government Bureau Handling Restrictions On Jews 'Liquidated'

By the Associated Press

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, March 7.—Gen. Henri Giraud today repudiated all decrees issued by Vichy since the armistice, and "liquidated" the entire government bureau having to do with restrictions on Jews.

Giraud, as civil and military commander of French Africa, removed from office M. Bouny, director of a government department, for allowing to be published in the government gazette two decrees affecting Jews which were signed by Marshal Petain and dated October 19, 1942.

An official statement by Giraud in effect officially repudiated all decrees of the Vichy government.

The statement:

"The Journal Official de L'Algerie of the second of March, 1943, published two decrees of October 19, 1942, published in Vichy relative to the status of the native Jew in Algieria.

"This publication was made without my authorization. It was issued by director of the reserve affairs (department) of the government general, which I immediately suppress. Monsieur Bouny, director of the government general is removed from office.

"All copies of the official Journal of March 2 are withdrawn from circulation.

Formal Repealers Expected

"The decree signed in Vichy has no effect in French Africa. The German occupation interrupted the free exercise of national sovereignty. This must have its logical consequences. The necessary steps will be taken."

It is not known exactly how the decrees happened to be published. Both dealt with how Jews might become citizens. But publication brought to a head criticism from many sources of the Giraud re-

Only One Plane Gets Through in Nazi London Raid

London (Monday), March 8 (AP).—A few German raiders streamed up the Thames early today, causing air raid warnings in the London area for the second time in a week.

The alert lasted about 30 minutes, and antiaircraft guns opened up. Only one raider reached the London area, but was apparently unable to dump its bombs.

Fifteen or more German Focke-Wulf 190s raided a southeast coast town yesterday, causing casualties with machine-gunning and bombing and scoring hits on a large hotel, a bank, and a store. Fighter-bombers also struck a south coast town, causing casualties and damage.

Two raiders were shot down.

Allied fighter squadrons swept over the Channel this afternoon, and antiaircraft fire was heard from Calais, on the French coast.

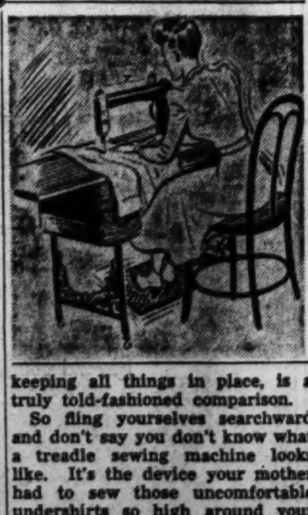
This'll Put You in Stitches

Old-Fashioned Girl's Desire Is Old-Time Sewing Machine



By Scott Hart
Post Staff Writer

An old-fashioned girl is among us with a desire for an old deal sewing machine that operates by the pumping of a treadle and will stop, with no further finageling around, when an old-fashioned girl says stop.

There was, as you may know if you're old enough to recall, an instinctive mood in the old-fashioned girl to keep command of her work at all times, either in sewing or love, to say stop and mean it at the proper conclusion either of a hemstitch or embrace.

To leave a termination of anything to electricity — however promising that new-fangled device may seem to some progressive minds — is unwarrantable risk liable to run away and sew up the neighborhood, and so the old-fashioned girl has written The Post:

"Have you an old treadle sewing machine stuck away in the attic, mother? Maybe the perfectly good one you discarded when you bought that nice new electric that runs itself . . . Well, there's a girl in this city who wants that machine. She is afraid of the electric machine and the old-fashioned kind you have tucked away in your attic seems to her as scarce as hen's teeth," which, by way of flavor and keeping all things in place, is a truly told-fashioned comparison.

So fling yourselves searchward and don't say you don't know what a treadle sewing machine looks like. It's the device your mother had to sew those uncomfortable undershirts so high around your neck; which prim young ladies used to pedal and thereby cause a wig-wagging of the hips to the crimsoning shock of disquieted onlookers who just knew that the devil invented most everything.

Wistful, our old-fashioned girl asked anonymity, completely sewed us up and we think of her only as Miss Penelope, which isn't the name but might be. Pensively she smiled an exit.

Communications concerning treadle sewing machines for sale may be addressed to Box 461, care The Post.

Would Send Milk, Vitamins

Ease Blockade to Aid Children Under Nazis, Canterbury Asks

By the Associated Press

New York, March 7.—The Archbishop of Canterbury, head of the Church of England, has asked the British government to permit "a strictly limited scheme" to send dried milk and vitamins to the children and expectant mothers of certain Nazi-occupied countries, it was announced tonight by the Rt. Rev. Henry St. George Tucker, Episcopal bishop and president of the Federal Council of Churches.

Bishop Tucker added that American church leaders have been conferring with United States Government officials urging adoption of similar proposals. The Archbishop said:

"I take my stand on this question on the ground of sheer human sympathy. All are agreed that the chief service this country could render is to win the war. But the accounts I have received of the state of starvation in the occupied countries and the deplorable condition of the children, especially in Greece and Belgium, have convinced me that a strictly limited scheme to send dried milk and vitamins for children and expectant mothers to these countries, to France and eventually to Holland and to Norway, is urgently necessary . . .

"I am convinced that the scheme would not aid the enemy or hinder the war effort. I have reports of a growing bitterness and alienation from this country as a result of the blockade which might seriously affect the aid that could be given to our arms when the time came, as most certainly the loss of vigor through starvation must affect it.

"I fear that at the end of the war we shall find a relatively vigorous Germany surrounded by peoples so weakened by starvation as to present an inevitable drawback to after-war plans. . . ."

250 Poles Die Daily in Nazi Prison Camp

By the Associated Press

London, March 7.—The Polish government-in-exile asserted today that 250 Poles were dying daily in a "murder camp" at Oswiecim, Poland, as a result of "executions, inhuman treatment, hunger and epidemics."

Prisoners were said still to be pouring into the camp. Sixty Polish miners accused of slowing their output were shot at Oswiecim in batches of 10, the officials charged.

Berliners Praised

London, March 7 (AP).—Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels, German propaganda minister, praised residents of Berlin in a message today for their behavior during the R. A. F. raid on the capital last Monday night, which he admitted caused "great damage," the Berlin radio reported.

"The English believed the Berlin population would not stand up to what London suffered," Goebbels said. "You have given your answer."

Rationing in Chungking

Chungking, March 7 (AP).—Strict rationing of meat, sugar and cooking oil will be instituted in Chungking March 15. Elaborate restaurant meals will be eliminated and simple fixed-priced meals will be substituted.

Pork will be on sale only one day out of five and ration cards will be issued for the purchase of sugar, cooking oil and other household necessities. Sale of all articles classed as luxuries will be strictly forbidden.

It will become a penal offensive to play cards—now almost the sole amusement of many foreigners living in the capital. Permanent waves are outlawed. Army officers are forbidden to ride in rickshas or sedan chairs.

Lights must be shut off for 5½ hours one night out of five.

Military Goal Held Justified

ganized by Byrnes specifically for the manpower study with no intention that it would become a so-called war cabinet or that its meetings would continue after it completes its recommendations.

Officials Interviewed

In the first phase of its work, the committee called before it at the White House last week Chairman Donald M. Nelson and Executive Vice Chairman Charles E. Wilson of the War Production Board; Chairman Paul V. McNutt of the War Manpower Commission; Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey of Selective Service; Secretary of Agriculture Wickard, the Food Administrator; Isador Lubin of the Bureau of Labor Statistics and various officials of the U. S. Employment Service. Early said it has now completed its interviews with Government officials and will reconvene Wednesday to start drafting its recommendations.

Most of these officials have been before congressional committees recently with varying figures on manpower needs. Each has approached the problem chiefly from the viewpoint of the sector of the economy with which his organization is concerned.

Figures Being Sifted

The Byrnes Committee is sifting all these figures and attempting to fix manpower quotas for each activity. Thus it is expected to reach a conclusion on the size of the Army, the number of persons required to obtain industrial production for essential military and civilian purposes, and the number of persons who must work the farms to produce food.

An informed official said there was little doubt the figure for the armed forces would remain at the point where Mr. Roosevelt said it was fixed last August on the basis of military needs.

"That is one figure you can count on," he remarked, declining to be quoted by name.

In a press conference February 20, the President took a firm stand on the military manpower goal, giving clear indication he was of no mind to change the decision he said he had made as Commander-in-Chief, despite Congressional pressure to cut the size of the Army to keep more men on farms.

Total of 10,800,000

Present military goals would put a total of 8,200,000 men in Army uniform by the end of 1943, of whom 700,000 would be officers. The Navy's goal has been set at approximately 2,200,000. This, with other branches of the service, would make the over-all figure for the armed forces at least 10,800,000.

Once the Byrnes Committee has determined definitely all the needs, it will be confronted with the question of how the available manpower shall be drawn into the various pools and an equitable balance maintained.

The complex factors may lead the committee to study the advisability of substituting some form of compulsory control for the present so-called voluntary methods, of which McNutt is a strong exponent.

To Seize Needed Islands From Japs, Magnuson Says

By Alex H. Singleton
Associated Press Staff Writer

A far-reaching plan to make the Pacific an American lake after the war was unfolded yesterday by Representative Magnuson, Democrat of Washington, chairman of a House Naval subcommittee studying acquisition of "stepping stone" island bases.

He announced that the subcommittee already has received a promise of cooperation in its investigation of defense needs from the State Department, through Assistant Secretary Breckinridge Long, and from the Navy Department.

Lesson Learned

The master plan Magnuson outlined in an interview envisions use of the Pacific bases both for commercial trade with the Orient and as "filling stations" for a big Pacific fleet, "For we've learned our lesson—we aren't going to scrap ships again."

He said that the subcommittee's first task would be to determine just what the Navy needs in the way of bases, what it has now as a result of development during this war, and what must be done to insure American rights for their postwar use.

"We know some of those we need, and we aren't going to have to worry about how we are going to get them—we'll just take them," he said, referring to the well-developed Japanese air and naval bases in the mandated Gilbert and Marshall islands.

"In the cases of others, however, it will be up to this committee to correlate the Navy's needs with the work of the State Department in opening up discussion to see that they are met. In some cases there are islands which we need in which the sovereignty is disputed; in others, there are the claims of private ownership."

Magnuson knows at first hand many of the islands which fit into the Navy's future pattern of defense. As a youth he shipped on cargo vessels on Pacific voyages. As a lieutenant commander in the Naval Reserve he served for six months last year with the Pacific Fleet.

On Equitable Basis

He declared that there is nothing in the committee's plan designed to "force or coerce" friendly powers into giving up Pacific possessions but expressed belief that "arrangements can be made on a sensible, equitable basis."

"But," he added, "I see nothing to convince me that it won't be up to the United States to maintain peace in the Pacific after the war. And what's the use of going to the peace table with indefinite plans about what we will need to do it. That's why the committee has been created. We're going to do the spadework now."

Secretary of the Navy Knox has been a leading advocate of acquiring the bases. To at least three committees of Congress he has emphasized the necessity of the action.

British Bombers Wreck Mandalay Rail Installations

New Delhi, March 7 (AP).—R. A. F. bombers made a highly successful attack on the railway station and freight yards at Mandalay Friday night, demolishing buildings and railroad cars and starting a number of fires, a British communique said today.

Yesterday R. A. F. bombers and fighters bombed Kalachaung on the Mayu Peninsula of Burma and other fighters shot up river craft on the Pichaung River in the Arakan hills.

Allied fighters destroyed five and probably destroyed or damaged several other enemy planes.

Men Over 38 Are Reclassified

eligible or who, before May 1, 1943, become eligible for classification into Class 2-C or Class 3-C shall be immediately reopened and they shall be classified in Class 2-C or Class 3-C. The classification of all other registrants now in Class 4-H shall be reopened and they shall be classified anew as soon as possible after May 1, 1943."

Induction of men past 38 was ordered stopped last December 5, except in instances where special abilities were required, and since that date some men in that upper age group have been discharged from the Army, though only to enter essential occupations.

Recent intensification of the manpower crisis, however, has brought forecasts that it would be necessary to resort to calling men of more advanced age and many fathers heretofore deferred.

The War Department said that its suspension of induction of 38-year-olds and over in December was based on three years of experience, "which indicates that men 38 years of age and over are in general physically less able to withstand the rigors of present day combat activities and that many of these men can make a more effective contribution to the war effort in industry rather than in the Army."

The plain indication in yesterday's order that the older men will be encouraged to take up farm work follows mounting warnings that the food-production campaign may fall considerably short of the Government's goals.

On Saturday orders were issued by the War Manpower Commission for cessation of the drafting of essential farm workers, even if such a course should leave military calls for manpower "unfilled."

'The Yanks Are Here'

London, March 7 (INS).—An American flag on which was lettered "The Yanks are here" fluttered down onto the French port of Brest, now a Nazi U-boat and naval base, as American bombers blasted that city Saturday, it was revealed today.

The flag was dropped from an attacking Liberator bomber by its radio operator, Sergt. Wesley Rankin of Hollywood, Calif.

Red Army Enveloping Vyazma

aimed at a wide encirclement of Orel.

The Soviet said more than 1,000 Nazis were killed in this latter push in three days, and although the Russians were within 20 miles of their railway objective they apparently were meeting increasingly heavy resistance.

Vyazma on the Central front was menaced by Russian columns striking from at least two sides—east and north. The Red Army units that seized Gzhatsk went on today to take 74 more localities, and other units swinging down from the north occupied 20 populated places.

Swing Around Vyazma

This latter Red Army drive was swinging around Vyazma and was believed to be near Nikitinka, the beginning of a rail spur that leads 35 miles southward to the Vyazma-Smolensk railway at a point 45 miles in the rear of the Nazi Vyazma garrison.

"Soviet troops are delivering heavy blows and are closely pursuing the enemy, preventing him from taking up defense positions," the communique said of this push.

The Russian midday communique had reported the killing of nearly 4800 Germans, most of them in the Saturday fighting that toppled Gzhatsk, 100 miles west of Moscow. "As he retreats," the communique said, "the enemy abandons arms and equipment."

The eventual Russian goal on the Central Front was Smolensk, 230 miles west of Moscow, while the Lake Ilmen drive was aimed at severing Nazi communications between the Central Front and German troops in the Leningrad sector.

Germans Claim Success

Berlin's high command said the Russians were beating against Starya Russa's fortifications "again and again," but declared each attacking wave broke under concentrated fire. The Germans were reported using large forces of planes in this battle.

The Nazi high command also declared that parts of the Twelfth and Fifteenth Tank Corps, a cavalry corps and three infantry divisions of the Third Soviet Army had been wiped out south of Kharkov—a sector about which the Russians have been silent for days now.

A Berlin radio commentary went further to claim that 28,000 Russians fell during the day in this area, which by German accounts is on a line running eastward toward the Donets Basin from Lozovaya, 75 miles south of Kharkov.

Jungle War Averted

Melbourne, Australia, March 6 (Delayed) (AP).—Prime Minister Curtin said today the necessity for fighting another jungle war had been removed by the Bismarck Sea victory in which a convoy of 12 Japanese transports and 10 warships was destroyed.

compared with none for the British.

These large losses, however, failed to halt Rommel's plan intended to cripple the Eighth Army and thereby delay by weeks or perhaps months the Allied effort to oust him from Africa.

Despite bad weather which protected the movements of the Axis forces from the bombs of superior Allied air forces, Montgomery's crack desert fighters were ready and waiting for the assault which an Allied communique said was "decisively held."

For the most part, the battle has been between Eighth Army artillery and German armored units, but British tanks also are known to be in action.

(The Dakar radio broadcast a report heard by C. B. S. that French patrols "are now no more than 3 kilometers (nearly 2 miles) from Gafsa," in southern Tunisia northwest of the Mareth Line, but gave no source for the announcement.)

Nazis Claim Cape Serrat

British losses were declared "negligible," with the Eighth Army's strength for the expected assault on the Mareth bastion unimpaired.

The German and Italian commands reported only "local actions" in southern Tunisia. The Berlin broadcast said Axis scouting parties had "advanced far into enemy territory," and the fighter planes had attacked Allied tank detachments and motorized columns "with visible success."

(A Berlin broadcast said the Germans had taken Cape Serrat, which juts into the Mediterranean 38 miles west of the Bizerte naval base, in a thrust at the Allied left wing.)

Fierce fighting between opposing patrols was reported in the wild hills north and south of the British First Army's new positions at Temara, on the road from Mateur to Tabarka in northern Tunisia.

German attacks which caused the British to abandon the town of Sedjenane two days ago and take up new positions on the heights 7 miles westward were reported to have "diminished in intensity."

Field reports, however, said the Germans occupied high ground in "some strength" and had brought up artillery to shell roads behind the British positions. Djebel Abiod, an important road junction, was said to have been shelled, as well as the road south of that point.

Shrubbery Provides Cover

Thick shrubbery was said to provide fine protective cover for infiltrating Axis troops. Hurricane bombers protected by Spitfire fighters were reported harrying Axis ground forces and bombing Nazi concentrations at Sedjenane.

The Allied communique said British and American fighter planes were "particularly active" throughout yesterday's actions, despite bad weather in northern Tunisia. Three Allied planes were reported missing, against a single enemy fighter destroyed in air combat.

(The Algiers radio, heard by the Associated Press in London, reported that 21 Axis tanks were destroyed in the early stages of the battle before the Mareth Line and that the Eighth Army's artillery was pouring a heavy fire into the Mareth fortifications. It declared the British Army was "complete mater of the situation.")

In northern Tunisia the Axis was estimated to have lost 45 tanks, including a number of 60-ton mark VI's, since February 26. At least 30 destroyed tanks were visible on the battlefields.

Soviet Women Sent Greetings From U. S.

London (Monday), March 8 (AP).—The Moscow radio today broadcast greetings from Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, Secretary of Labor Francis Perkins, and Mrs. Oveta Culp Hobby, head of the WAACS, to Soviet women on the occasion of Women's Day. The broadcasts were heard by the Soviet monitor.

Lend-Lease Facing Debate in Congress

Party 'Minute Men'

Democrats Plan Defense In Congress

By Cecil B. Dickson

Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

Faithful followers of the New Deal are being organized as "minute men" in both House and Senate to answer congressional critics of the Roosevelt Administration.

This strategy was adopted yesterday by Democratic leaders following conferences last week with the new Democratic National Committee chairman, Postmaster General Frank Walker.

Walker initiated the plan, suggesting that picked men be designated to study specific legislative and administrative subjects, and be prepared to present facts and arguments in debate when anti-Administration men, be they Democrats or Republicans, attack the policies of President Roosevelt.

The quiet Pennsylvanian, who came originally from Montana, and who has big interests in New York, has made many friends in Congress among both pro and anti-New Deal members. He has made great strides in selling the idea that conflict over domestic issues should be suspended for the duration of the war.

War Effort Assailed

During the first two months of the second war Congress, most of the sessions of both branches have been consumed by Republicans and anti-New Deal Democrats in attacks on the Roosevelt war effort as it relates to civilians.

The farm, food, manpower, price fixing, anti-inflation, taxation, business regulation and pro-labor policies of the Administration have been under constant fire. Few of the charges have been answered by Administration supporters immediately because they have been caught flat-footed, and did not have the facts.

Some of the Democratic leaders have been in favor of waiting out the attacks in the belief that Republicans and anti-New Deal Democrats would wear out themselves and the public, and that their criticism would bring about a reaction of public opinion against carping in Congress.

Walker, who with Senator Guffey of Pennsylvania, chairman of the Democratic Senatorial Campaign Committee, Chairman Adolph J. Sabath (Democrat) of Illinois of the House Rules Committee and Senator Murray (Democrat) of Montana are leading the drive for a draft-Roosevelt campaign in 1944, has been deeply concerned over the attacks. This is based on the fear that the cumulative effect will be to bring the Administration into public disfavor, as well as interfere with the war effort.

Need of Unity Seen

Democratic leaders said Walker emphasized that unless unity was restored among Democrats in Congress, and charges against the New Deal were answered, the party would have little chance of remaining in power after 1944: that another administration might have to finish the war. He warned them that defeat in 1944 would make it impossible for the Democrats to obtain control over the Government again for a decade or so.

Appreciating that actual control is out of their hands, Democratic leaders are concerned mainly with continuing expiring laws carrying out Administration policies.

Outside of getting through the 100-billion-dollar armament budget and a new 16-billion-dollar tax bill asked by Mr. Roosevelt, the Democratic leaders want to secure passage of a one-year extension of lend-lease, three-year extension of reciprocal trade, continuation of dollar devaluation and other monetary policies expiring this year and a lifting of the debt limit to 210 billion dollars.

Controversy Over Postwar Policies Presages Fight

By the Associated Press

The Lend-Lease Act will reach the House floor today with all factions agreed on the necessity for its continuance but with prospects of controversy over attempts to write some postwar foreign policies into the law.

The measure, calling for a new lease on life for the act until July of next year, will be debated for three days in the House.

It emerged from the House Foreign Affairs Committee with a unanimous vote of approval, and without an amendment. Indications are that it will fare as well in the Senate committee.

But regardless of the committee action, Capitol Hill expects efforts to change the legislation during its consideration in an attempt to use America's war-extended aid as a bartering point for postwar considerations.

Among the amendments likely to be offered are these:

1. A requirement that any final settlement of lend-lease aid between this Nation and its Allies be submitted to Congress for approval.

2. A clause to prevent use of any lend-lease material to subject any people to the control or dominance of another nation. Sponsors of the proposal said they had in mind British relations with India.

3. A stipulation that a definite amount of the lend-lease material—possibly 10 per cent—must be earmarked for China as a result of the recent plea made by Mme. Chiang Kai-shek before Congress for increased supplies.

4. A change in the title of the bill to "War Supply Act" to emphasize that this Nation is not expecting a dollars-and-cents return for the materials sent to the Allies.

Sponsors of the bill plan to stress in their arguments the operation of lend-lease in reverse, and point out how this Nation now is receiving supplies for its troops in foreign lands, along with repairs to battle-damaged ships in ports of the other Allied nations.

Air Field Question

The major argument appeared likely to develop over the proposal of several Congressmen that the bill include some guarantee that this country will be permitted to use commercially after the war the air fields it has built on foreign soil for war use.

Along that line, the next three days may see an attempt to write into the measure conditions that the bases leased to this country by England, as well as those developed in the Pacific, be turned over to the United States permanently.

Lend-Lease Administrator E. R. Stettinius, jr., made public on the eve of the House debate a report showing that besides actual weapons the United States has shipped vast quantities of raw materials and industrial and communications equipment to Russia.

To measure America's contribution to the Russian Front, he said, account must be taken not only of planes and tanks but also of such items as: Three million pairs of heavy boots, 18,000 tons of sole leather, 72,500 trucks, 17,500 jeeps and armored cars, 7,700 motorcycles, 1,300 military tractors, 75,000 tons of rails, 17,000 tons of other railroad equipment.

Also 140,000 field telephones, "hundreds of thousands of miles" of field telephone wire, 268,000 tons of petroleum products, 580,000 tons of steel, 46,000 tons of aluminum and duraluminum, 21,500 tons of zinc, 94,000 tons of copper and brass, 50,000 tons of toluol and TNT, and 75,000 tons of other chemicals.

Tax Program Action Likely This Week

By Felix Cotten

International News Service Staff Writer

Representative Robert L. Doughton (Democrat) of North Carolina, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, predicted last night that the committee will agree on the framework of a pay-as-you-go income tax plan before the end of this week.

Several committee members forecast that the committee, which originates all revenue legislation, would approve today a 20 per cent withholding tax to be deducted by employers from pay checks and envelopes.

Any chance that such a tax may be put into operation on July 1, however, admittedly is fading, since Commissioner of Internal Revenue Guy T. Helvering has warned that, to go into effect on that date, the tax would have to be enacted into law by April 1.

One influential Ways and Means member said the committee probably would decide most of the major questions on pay-as-you-go legislation in the next two days. That will undoubtedly include, he said, adoption of a 20 per cent withholding tax and an agreement on how much 1942 income tax liabilities are to be forgiven.

Committee members generally are in a mood for action, especially since there has been more criticism of the group for failure to decide on a pay-as-you-go tax plan in the five weeks that it has been studying the subject.

"We have got to get down to action," Doughton said. "There have been all kinds of unavoidable delays. But we will get no forgiveness for that. We cannot have this committee discredited by failure to act on an important matter of this kind."

Another ranking committee member said "we might as well start voting tomorrow as next Christmas."

The committee, it was explained, may vote today on the pay-as-you-go bill recently introduced in the House by Representative Carlson (Democrat) of Kansas. This bill embodies a variation of the plan advocated by Beardsley Ruml, chairman of the board of the New York Federal Reserve Bank.

U. S. Suspends N. Y. Weekly For Sedition

By Dillard Stokes

Post Staff Writer

The Government last night suppressed a New York weekly called The Militant.

After long hearings where representatives of The Militant tried to answer Attorney General Biddle's charges of sedition, Postmaster General Walker invoked the Espionage Act of 1917 to bar the publication from the mails.

The order highlighted the fact that seditious material is still being widely circulated in the form of mimeographed bulletins, printed papers and slick paper booklets. These sheets protest their patriotic motives in the same columns that plant distrust of the other United Nations, sneer at the war effort and denounce the Department of Justice for the prosecutions already begun.

Attorney General Biddle had this to say about the publication suppressed last night:

"Since December 7, 1941, 'The Militant' has openly discourgaed participation in the war by the masses of the people. It is permeated with the thesis that the war is being fought solely for the benefit of the ruling groups and will serve merely to continue the enslavement of the working classes . . . the lines also include derision of democracy, stimulation of race issues and other material . . . appearing to be calculated to engender opposition to the war effort as well as to interfere with the morale of the armed forces."

New Support Reported for Allred Cause

By the Associated Press

The Administration appeared yesterday to be gaining ground in an effort to win Senate confirmation for President Roosevelt's appointment of James V. Allred, former Texas Governor, to the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals at New Orleans.

While opponents of the appointment continued to claim enough votes to force its rejection, one Democratic Senator who had intended to oppose the nomination said he had changed his mind since Allred appeared before a judiciary subcommittee, and denied reports that he had been promised reappointment to the judiciary if he was unsuccessful in a race for the Democratic senatorial nomination in Texas.

This Senator, who declined use of his name, said he was satisfied that some other Democratic members were swinging around to the same viewpoint.

Beaten by O'Daniel

Allred resigned as a Federal district judge to make an unsuccessful race for the nomination against Senator O'Daniel (Democrat of Texas, who was reelected, and his subsequent nomination to the Circuit Court stirred both Democratic and Republican opposition on the grounds that he was the beneficiary of a political "deal."

This charge was denied by Attorney General Francis Biddle in testimony before the Judiciary subcommittee which is expected to report to the full committee today on the nomination.

The subcommittee members, Chairman Hatch (Democrat) of New Mexico, and Senators O'Mahoney (Democrat) of Wyoming and Ferguson (Republican) of Michigan were silent as to their views, but supporters of Allred said they were confident of a favorable report. They were not quite so sure, however, about the result when the full committee votes.

Overton Charges

Senator Overton (Democrat) of Louisiana, who has opposed the Allred appointment on the grounds that the place should have been given to a resident of Louisiana, has charged that Postmaster General Frank C. Walker, Democratic National Chairman, was attempting to influence Senators to vote for confirmation.

The Allred nomination was reported to have been discussed last week when Walker was guest of several Senators at a luncheon, but some of those who attended said Walker himself took no part in the discussion. At that time, Walker was represented to have urged upon his hosts the necessity of congressional Democrats preserving more unity on the party front.

Some of the Senators were said to have observed that it was hard to keep a united front when such controversial nominations were made as that of Allied and Edward J. Flynn, former Democratic National Chairman, whose appointment as Minister to Australia was withdrawn after it aroused vigorous bipartisan opposition.

There remained little doubt, meanwhile, that the Administration was putting forth extraordinary efforts to prevent a repetition of the Flynn setback in the Allred case.

Huge Concentration of Planes Used to Crush Jap Convoy, U. S. Air Officer Discloses

(The following eye-witness account of last Wednesday's destruction on the Japanese convoy of 22 ships was written by Capt. W. S. Royalty of Peoria, Ill., navigator in a Mitchell bomber which scored a direct hit on a transport. Three Japanese light cruisers, seven destroyers, a dozen transport and cargo ships and 102 planes were destroyed.)

By Capt. W. S. Royalty

Associated Press Staff Writer

Somewhere in New Guinea, March 6 (Delayed).—We took off as No. 7 in a flight of B-25s about 8:30 a. m. We had heard several reports as to what the convoy consisted of. Naturally, everyone was a bit nervous in anticipation.

We knew from previous experiences that there would be Zeros protecting the ships, but we also knew we were to have some P-38s for top cover. After the way these P-38s have shown themselves in the past two or three months, it made us feel fairly safe from the Zeros.

Our planes were the first flight over the rendezvous point, which was some distance from the convoy's last reported position south of Finschhafen. We circled around, waiting for the rest of the planes in the coordinated attack.

As we made the first circle we could see coming over from the mountains an almost unbelievable number of planes. A number of B-17s were getting into formation slightly above us. Below us three separate flights of B-25s were already in formation and beginning to circle. Below also were a great number of Beaufighters, A-20s and P-40s, all in formation more or less.

A few thousand feet above I counted a number of P-38s in formations of two, threes and fours. It was the most concentrated flight of aircraft any of us had ever seen. After we had circled twice, all the planes started for the convoy at once. Our flight followed two flights of three B-17s each.

About 30 miles out we saw some ships of the convoy. Nearest to us, as we came closer, were what seemed to be two cruisers and three destroyers. These ships were making violent maneuvers and their wakes were streaming out 10 to 12 times their lengths. I counted six transports and cargo vessels on the other side of these warships and at least two more warships still farther on. The warships were moving fast, but the cargo ships seemed to be almost at a standstill.

We followed along behind the B-17s as they flew parallel to the line of warships and the nearest cruiser threw three broadsides at us—it looked like the whole ship was lighted up. As we got opposite this ship the B-17s turned off to go over the convoy.

Our flight went on for a minute or more and then turned in also. As we turned another broadside left the cruiser and immediately afterward one of the bombs from a B-17 hit that ship at dead center and huge clouds of smoke billowed out.

I didn't have the time to watch it any more. Below I saw almost an endless stream of planes strafing and bombing every ship in the convoy. A B-25 scored a direct hit on a large transport—and the whole stern blew up and burned fiercely.

We lined up on three transports and started a bombing run and then I saw seven or eight Zeros at about 12 o'clock (straight ahead) a long way off. Almost at the same time several P-38s came down on them. They started some good dogfights, but other things happening attracted my attention.

We were just dropping our bombs at the middle transport of three. Pictures showed later that we made a direct hit and some near misses.

As we turned to leave for home we saw at least five ships smoking and three of these flaming. A-20s, Beaufighters, B-25s and B-17s were still strafing and bombing all the ships I could see.

to promote efficiency in their yards.

Chairman Truman (Democrat) of Missouri in announcing the hearings, said "the committee believes the greatest contribution which can possibly be made to the manpower program is the efficient use of the employes that we now have and we desire to have these outstanding producers explain the methods which they have used, so that other producers can obtain the benefit thereof and go and do likewise."

Later in the week the House is to take up the bill increasing the statutory debt limit with the Administration set to fight the amendment by Representative Disney (Democrat) of Oklahoma which would wipe out President Roosevelt's executive order limiting salaries to $25,000 after taxes.

Salary Amendment

The amendment, approved by the Ways and Means Committee, would provide instead that salaries above $25,000 be pegged at their prewar level and that salaries which were below $25,000 before December 7, 1941, may not rise above $25,000 now.

The Senate is to take up tomorrow a bill by Senator Bankhead (Democrat) of Alabama establishing blanket draft deferment for farm workers, with Bankhead predicting its passage. Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat) of Wyoming announced he would attempt to write in a definition of necessary farm workers, to prevent abuse of the exemption by draft dodgers.

A House Ways and Means Subcommittee is expected to hand to the full Committee today the plan for a pay-as-you-go income tax collection. The program would cover all of the Nation's income taxpayers, with a provision under which wage and salary earners would pay a withholding tax of 20 per cent (constituting both income and Victory taxes).

signed by the president of the chapter, whom I know very well. It was the next best thing to being at home."

The gift? A handsome wallet, handkerchiefs and shoestrings. Seaman DeSavo said he was glad he contributed regularly to the Red Cross when he was back home.

These are some of the less spectacular, less dramatic, but nonetheless vital functions of the Red Cross. They're the little things, and along with the other activities more easily publicized, they constitute the reason why the Red Cross is asking Washingtonians to give $1,555,400 to its national campaign for funds.

How generously Washington is responding to this plea will be indicated at 12:30 p. m. today when campaign workers hold the first of a series of luncheon-report meetings in the United States Chamber of Commerce Building.

Already reported by the special gift committee, which has a goal of half a million dollars, are contributions totaling $248,437.

If You Get Up Nights You Can't Feel Right

If you have to get up 3 or more times a night your rest is broken and it's no wonder if you feel old and run down before your time. Functional rather than organic or systemic Kidney and Bladder trouble often may be the cause of many pains and symptoms simply because the Kidenys may be tired and not working fast enough in filtering and removing irritating excess acids, poisons and wastes from your blood. So if you get up nights or suffer from burning, scanty or frequent passages, leg pains, backache, or swollen ankles, due to non-organic or non-systemic Kidney and Bladder troubles, you'll make no mistake in trying the prescription called Cystex. Because it has given such joyous, happy relief in so high a percentage of such cases, Cystex is sold under a guarantee of money back on return of empty package unless completely satisfactory. Cystex costs only 35c at druggists.

D. C. Massage Parlor Raided As Call House in Vice Drive

Massage Treatment

A "treatment" which included a body massage by a pretty masseuse with the privilege of spending the night with her cost a minimum of $20, according to the raiders.

The majority of the business of the house, however, it was pointed out, was in answering calls from "important people" at hotels.

Investigation of the house has been in progress for almost a year, Federal agents declared, and was brought about at the instigation of the local police who had received numerous complaints about its operation.

Bond Offered

Late yesterday a well-dressed and apparently influential gentleman stormed the Detective Bureau with $3000 cash, demanding the immediate release of one of the girls. He refused to identify himself nor would a lawyer with him reveal the individual's name.

Entrance to the alleged bawdy house was gained by virtue of warrants issued by United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage. The suspects are scheduled to be arraigned before him this morning at 10 o'clock.

Well informed persons last night described the "Hopkins Institute" as rivaling the notorious Mahogany Hall of the 1800's. The latter place became virtually a national institution as a "play house" for influential personages before the turn of the century.

Follows on Heels Of Similar Case

Yesterday's raid on the "Hopkins Institute" followed closely on the heels of the arrest of "Dr." Mary Anna Swift, 59, who was charged with a White Slave Act violation closely paralleling conditions in the current case.

According to the FBI, "Dr." Swift, arrested at her home in a fashionable neighborhood, 7 Raymond Street, Chevy Chase, Md., posed as a legitimate masseuse and physiotherapist while operating a flourishing "call" business. The charge for treatments in this establishment, FBI agents said, varied from $15 to $30.

"Dr." Swift, along with seven girls from New York, were indicted February 8 by a District grand jury and currently are awaiting trial.

Mme. Chiang Near Faint at College

machine-made process of thinking."

"When I was a student here the world was then weltering in rivers of blood," she said. "Today the river has swelled into oceans, for the advance of science makes this war more deadly, more expensive in its toll of lives and human misery than the previous great war."

With a lengthy review of women who through the ages have "had a share in building the ever ascending pyramid of civilization," the wife of the Chinese generalissimo asserted that "whatever an individual can do is picayune compared with what a group can accomplish."

She declared that Wellesley's motto—Non ministrari sed ministrare (Not to be ministered unto but to minister)—had guided her in her work.

"First comes cooperation," she said, "that common and much used word which seems to convey so little and yet should mean so much.

"Second stands the spirit of humility..

"Probity in Thought"

"Last but not least ranks probity in thought and in action. It is transcendent thinking and the translating of these thoughts into deeds worthy of the name of human progress which differentiates men from beasts. Always have we frowned on moral turpitude, yet intellectual and mental dissipation are no less culpable of disdain. . . .

"With the riches of the ages within your grasp, with the wide field of specialized branches of knowledge to be had at your will, with the maturity of mind to be gained in your contracts with your professors and advisers, you should beware of machine-made processes of thinking," Mme. Chiang counseled.

"Do not be afraid to strike out and explore the fertile realm of your own minds and let them lead you in your conclusions to what they will so long as you are true and honest to yourselves. Nor do I counsel you to concur to shallow and supercilious omniscience.

"This present world struggle is a battle of light against darkness, of justice and right dealing against selfishness and greed. Indehiscence and mawkish maunder will not equip us for our battle through life. Stern days are still ahead. Yet within these very portals is the keynote of learning. It is here where your strength could be reinforced."

200 Held in French Labor Train Riots

London (Monday), March 8 (INS). More than 200 persons were arrested in France Sunday after French patriots barricaded railroad lines and stoned engineers of trains taking conscripted workers to Germany, the Daily Mail said today.

Riots followed and several policemen were stabbed. Among those arrested were many women, the dispatch declared.

Jap Airmen Continue to Shun Conflict, General Reports

By the Associated Press

New Delhi, March 7.—Increasing evidence that the Japanese are refusing to come out and fight in the air was reported by Brig. Gen. Clayton L. Bissell, commander of the United States Tenth Air Force, at a press conference today in which he summarized February operations in India, Burma and China.

During the month, he said, the air task force in China was unable to get a single Japanese plane into combat. Japanese bomber and fighter formations attacked an American air base in northeast India both on February 23 and 25; Bissell said, but fled in disorder when American fighters appeared.

During the month the Tenth Air Force in China and India made 490 sorties against the enemy in the course of 70 missions, Bissell disclosed. Altogether, 28 Japanese planes were known to have been destroyed and almost as many more probably destroyed or damaged, he said.

The commander said he was particularly delighted with two exploits.

Maj. Grant Mahony of Vallejo, Calif., was singled out for having destroyed 11 out of 12 grounded Japanese planes at an airbase back of the Salween River front. He went back the next day and got the twelfth.

As a result of such attacks, Bissell said, Japanese planes which had been attacking Chinese ground troops practically were kept out of the air during February.

The second exploit occurred when 46 Japanese planes attempted to attack an American air base in east India. Fourteen of the raiders were destroyed for certain and as many more probably were destroyed.

"Our aircraft broke up the attack and dealt with individuals and groups over a wide area," Bissell recounted. "The Japanese withdrew without showing much fight. They fled so fast that destroyed planes were scattered over a wide area of borderline jungle."

Bissell said only one American plane was hit by a bullet. He gave special credit to Col. Homer L. Sanders of San Antonio, Tex., commander of the pursuit group

Plane Wreckage Found in Arizona

Tucson, Ariz., March 7 (AP).—The wreckage of an Army plane was located from the air today about 50 miles northeast of here in the rugged Galluro Mountains and Davis-Monthan field officers said they assumed it was a B-17 bomber from Portland, Oreg., which has been missing since Wednesday with nine men aboard.

A land party hoped to reach the scene by morning.

Japs Retreat From Salween

By the Associated Press

Chungking, March 7.—After being subjected to furious Chinese counterattacks, Japanese troops on the west bank of the Salween River have started a general retreat, the Central News Agency reported today, adding that "many strategic points have been recovered by the Chinese."

The dispatch gave no further details, but it was recalled that an army spokesman stated recently that Japanese positions on the west bank of the Salween stretched 35 miles northward from the Burma Road Bridge which spans the river.

In Yunnan Province, an enemy column striking northward from Tachupa encountered stiff Chinese resistance and was unable to make headway, the communique declared.

Chinese forces on the east bank of the Lungchwan River were reported to have captured Kiangtzuchen March 1.

(The Tokyo radio broadcast that 20,000 Chinese troops headed by Gen. Wang Ching-shai were taken prisoner in "mopping up" operations the past week and about 7000 were killed.)

Navy Raids Munda Base, Japs Kill 2 at Tulagi

Air assaults on Japanese positions in the central Solomon Islands have been continued, the Navy reported yesterday, while the enemy retaliated with a raid on Tulagi which killed two Americans.

The Jap forward base at Munda on New Georgia Island, 180 nautical miles northwest of Guadalcanal, was pounded Solomons time for the eighty-fifth time since November. Results were not reported.

The same day, four-motored Liberator bombers started fires among enemy installations at Kahili, Buin and Ballale in the Shortland Island area. These positions are some 300 nautical miles northwest of Guadalcanal.

The Munda raid followed closely upon bombardment of that base by a United States surface force which sank two enemy destroyers in a night battle a few hours before.

Text of Navy communique No. 302:

"South Pacific (all dates are East Longitude)

"1 On March 5:

(a) U. S. aircraft bobmed enemy installations at Viru Harbor on the southern coast of New Georgia Island.

"(b) During the night of March 5-6, Japanese planes raided U. S. position on Tulagi Island, 20 miles north of Guadalcanal airfield. Two men were killed.

"2. On March 6:

"(a) During the early morning a large force of U. S. planes bombed and strafed Japanese positions at Munda on New Georgia Island. Results were not reported.

"(b) During the morning, Liberator heavy bombers (Consolidated) bombed and started fires in the enemy-held areas at Kahili, Buin and Ballale in the Shortland Island area."

D. C. Man Promoted in Coast Guard

John Placos, 22, of 2311 Nichols Avenue Southeast, has been promoted by the Coast Guard from boatswain's mate third class to boatswain's mate second class for meritorious service in the North African landing operation, the Navy Department announced yesterday.

His citation declares he was "recommended for advancement to next higher rating for exemplary courage and disregard of his personal safety."

Hamm Railway Yard Raid Real Thriller

Capt. McCrary, Former N. Y. Editor, Learns Why Nazi Industrial Areas Are 'Big League'

By Capt. J. R. (Tex) McCrary

(Distributed by International News Service)

(A graphic eye-witness account of last Thursday's Flying Fortress raid on the Hamm railway yards in northwestern Germany and the furious air fighting provoked by it is given in the following dispatch by Capt. J. R. ("Tex") McCrary of the United States Army Air Force, and formerly a New York newspaperman.)

At a Flying Fortress Station Somewhere in England, March 7.—Squinting through the ring-sight of a .50-caliber gun down the spine of a Flying Fortress right smack into the teeth of every kind of top-flight Nazi fighter—that's when you realize why the skies over Germany's industrial targets are known among our airmen as "the big league."

Our fortress was one of the planes that fought through to the railway yards at Hamm last Thursday. It was a most peaceful Germany on this particular morning—until suddenly our radio-gunner (a radio operator who also operates a machine gun aboard a bomber) lurched against my back and knocked me through a passageway onto the curved top of a revolving ball turret.

My foot caught in the turret gears, and I tried to yank it loose, but forgot the foot and everything else when I looked down at my hands and saw pink-red blood washing down the rubber-matted floor and curling over my fingers.

Radio-Gunner's Blood

I had never seen so much blood before, and I did not know where it came from. . . . Then I looked beyond my hands. Crumpled crazily on the floor was the radio-gunner, a gay, strong-legged boy who had just slapped on my oxygen mask 10 seconds ago.

I saw his face twisted in pain—surprised pain. The red blood which sogged my gloves and flying boots burbled out of a great, gaping wound in his back. A slug had crashed down through the bomb bay and struck him on the spine.

I didn't know the boy's name. I had just reached the plane in time for the takeoff and there had been no time for swapping names, but a brief second ago he had offered me chewing gum to relax the popping in my ears.

He had fallen across my oxygen lines—that's serious five miles up. Without oxygen you not only can't help anybody else, but become a liability to the others.

But there was no time to fix the lines now. I had time only to rip off my parachute, dive into the meager first-aid kit, claw awkwardly at the unfamiliar dressings and scissors and start hacking at his clothes. To do the job required help of fingers more skilled than mine. I grabbed two spare film packs and threw them at one of the waistgunners.

The gunner looked around. His hands were as quick as mine were slow. He grabbed the walk-around oxygen bottle, came back and helped administer our pathetically inadequate first aid. Two hypos eased the boy's pain and I wished then I had been a doctor instead of a newspaperman.

For the rest of my life, "guts" always will be defined in terms of the memory of the magnificent display of courage I saw in that boy's eyes as his own blood ran past his face on the floor.

War Muscles In

Then the war muscled in again. We were over the target and suddenly our bombs dropped away. I didn't know exactly when ours let go—I was just hanging on in the radio hatch, trying not to look like a gunner in the wrong shooting gallery. The real gunner was lying beneath the gun between my feet. I tried to remember to practice what a veteran had preached to me once, "just keep lead in his eyes, Bud; keep hot lead in his eyes and Jerry won't knock at your door."

Then the Jerries fired on us. I tried desperately hard to remember all the gunnery rules of deflection firing—the stuff about wing spans and the number of ringsights to lead your target. Actually, I filled my sights with 17 enemy planes during the next crowded half-hour.

Did I hit anything? Of course not. All I tried to do was to keep lead in their eyes. It does make you more comfortable to pull a trigger rather than just stand hoping that Jerry is after another plane and not the one your're in.

I watched twin-engined, gray-bellied Junkers-88's crawl up from the rear. Each time a Jerry went over I'm scramble frantically to toss a necklace of slugs at him.

I wasted them, sure. But our top turreteer creased a Jerry properly and our right waistgunner tatooed the gray belly of another. It was a beautiful sight.

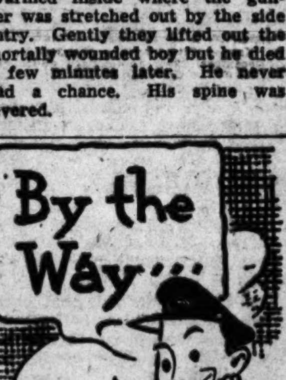
I wasn't really scared—not until the show was over—but it was no credit to my own nerves. The full credit belonged to the skipper, Capt. Oscar O'Neill, a dark, handsome boy from Latin America. The whole Fortress throbbed with O'Neill's special kind of guts; confidence pulsed back through ribs and muscles; the whole bomber was transfused by O'Neill's hands at the controls. He made the bomber buck and dive in evasive action like Tommy Hitchcock used to handle a polo pony.

One of the forts was falling out of formation. That's what the Jerries love. They seemed almost to queue up to make passes at it and hammered the ship down, although I didn't see it hit the deck.

When the Jerries start to make a pass at you they are just thin, black edges getting thicker and longer, coming closer and closer, and then, suddenly, surprisingly, spitting out a long, reaching line of smoke toward you.

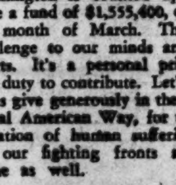
These smokeliness sometimes turn into bursts of brown puffs at the end of 600 yards or so as the explosive 20-milimeter shells pop like miniature flak.

O'Neill poured on the coal to et the wounded gunner back to the medicos. We got down fast and hard, taxied quickly off the runway toward a waiting ambulance. Men swarmed inside where the gunner was stretched out by the side entry. Gently they lifted out the mortally wounded boy but he died a few minutes later. He never had a chance. His spine was severed.



Give More This Year!

America dedicates the first Spring month to "The Greatest Mother In The World". There's work to be done—so much work—in so many places. Today the Red Cross needs the help of everyone of us as never before. Metropolitan Washington is counted upon to raise a fund of $1,555,400, during the month of March. That's a challenge to our minds and our hearts. It's a personal privilege and duty to contribute. Let's each of us give generously in the traditional American Way, for the alleviation of human suffering on all our fighting fronts and at home as well.



Once Upon A Time. Upper Connecticut Avenue, Wisconsin Avenue, upper 14th Street, Georgia Avenue, other busy streets were far out of town. Land was cheap, with few buyers. Imagine a shopkeeper opening up in a cow pasture. What changed those avenues and streets into populated and prosperous sections of Washington? The answer is public transportation—Street Cars first and then Buses. When people were provided with dependable transportation, the "way out" avenues and streets outgrew the farm days. The same was true of every section of Washington; it is true today. Street Cars and Buses are the red corpuscles of any community.

Asthma Mucus Fought Doctor's Way

If you suffer from choking, gasping, wheezing, recurring attacks of Bronchial Asthma, here is good news for you. A prescription called Mendaco perfected by a physician in his private practice contains ingredients which start circulating thru the blood within a very short time after the first dose, thus reaching the congested Bronchial tubes where it usually quickly helps liquefy, loosen and remove thick strangling mucus (phlegm), thereby promoting freer breathing and more restful sleep. Fortunately Mendaco has now been made available to sufferers from recurring spasms of Bronchial Asthma thru all drug stores and has proved so helpful to so many thousands it is offered under a guarantee of money back unless completely satisfactory. You have everything to gain, so get Mendaco from your druggist today for only [illegible]. The guaranteed trial offer protects you.

Army Believes 14 Drowned In Maneuvers

Atlanta, March 7.—Fourteen soldiers are believed to have drowned in an accident in night maneuvers in the Gulf of Mexico off Florida, the Army's Fourth Service Command announced today. Two officers and three men were rescued.

A landing barge with 19 aboard ran aground on a sandbar near Carrabelle, Fla., Friday night after a storm hit the northwest Florida coast and the landing ramp was accidentally lowered, the announcement said. The men were members of the garrison of Camp Gordon Johnston, at Carrabelle.

First Sergt. John E. Johnson, Kane, Pa., is known to be dead.

The missing, who are "believed to be drowned," are: Staff Sergt. Chester S. Domaracki, Erie, Pa.; Corpl. Joseph Corso, Blairsville, Pa.; Technician Fifth Grade Ernest Scherha, McKeesport, Pa.; Private First Class James M. Campbell, Johnstown, Pa.; Private First Class Martin B. McCormick, Chicago, Ill.; Private First Class Clay Hatch, Los Angeles, Calif.

Titled Gunners' 2-Pound Piece Blasts German Tank in Africa

By the Associated Press

At the Tunisian Front, March 6 (Delayed).—Where officers stop and chat they are still talking about the "good show" put on by a guardsman gunner a fortnight ago in fighting about Sbiba.

Three Nazi tanks—A Mark VI, a Mark IV, and a Mark III—took up a position from which they were able to put down a perilous fire among British tanks, but could not be reached by British artillery. When the situation became apparent, a lieutenant in the Coldstream Guards, Lord James Leveson, said:

"We must have a shot at them somehow."

He took a two-pounder gun into the open valley between the enemy and the Allied positions and set it up facing the tanks. He warned his crew to work fast to get their shots in before the tanks turned on him.

The third shot knocked out the Mark III and set it afire. Several other shots hit the other two tanks, but did not damage them sufficiently to put them out of action. In all the crew fired 18 rounds.

They stopped only when the Mark VI turned on them. The first shot from the huge tank's 88-millimeter gun made a direct hit on the small British field piece, and it practically disappeared. No member of the gun crew was hurt, and all were able to crawl back to their positions.

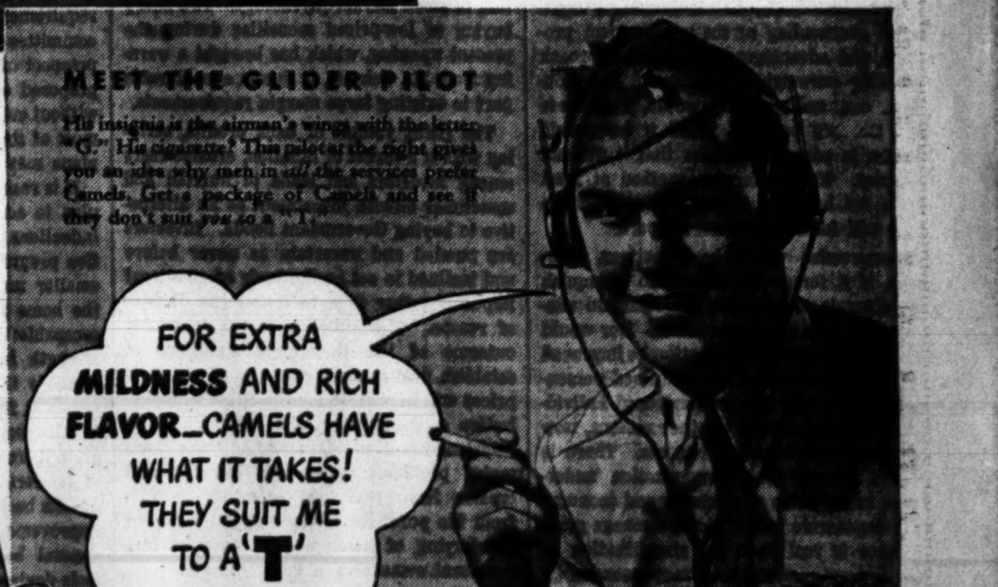
WITH MEN IN THE ARMY, NAVY, THE MARINE CORPS, AND THE COAST GUARD, THE FAVORITE CIGARETTE IS CAMEL (BASED ON ACTUAL SALES RECORDS IN POST EXCHANGES AND CANTEENS)



MEET THE GLIDER PILOT

His insignia is the airman's wings with the letter "G." His cigarette? This pilot at the right gives you an idea why men in all the services prefer Camels. Get a package of Camels and see if they don't suit you to a "T."

FOR EXTRA MILDNESS AND RICH FLAVOR—CAMELS HAVE WHAT IT TAKES! THEY SUIT ME TO A 'T'

They've Got What it Takes

THEY call 'em "cloud hoppers"—these keen, alert glider pilots of the Army Air Force. Like so many Americans, they're learning an entirely new job—and proving they've got what it takes.

It's the same all along the line—on the home front, too, millions are proving that good old American "know how" just can't be beat! And that goes for cigarettes, too. For when you take costlier tobaccos and that priceless "know how" of blending that produce a slow-burning cigarette, you've got the cigarette for steady smoking pleasure...Camels.

Try Camels yourself—you'll find they give you smoking pleasure that holds up, pack after pack.

Propaganda Offensive

Acting Secretary of State Sumner Welles has promptly and emphatically given the lie to the Nazi propagandists who are trying to convince our Latin-American neighbors that the United States is acquiring bases in those countries for aggressive purposes. The Nazis are attributing to this country the deceptive strategy which they have used in taking over their smaller neighbors. But even the Nazis know that it is utterly false to draw any analogy between their control over Europe and the defensive arrangement existing between the countries of the Western Hemisphere. And that distinction is certainly clear in every capital in North and South America.

It is true, of course, that we are using various air and naval bases outside of our own territory to protect the Americas and carry the war to the Axis. Instead of encroaching upon the rights of our neighbors, however, we have established all of these bases in conformity with agreements worked out in full understanding and mutual good faith. Such agreements follow the pattern approved by the second meeting of the Ministers of Foreign Affairs of the American Republics at Havana in 1940. And their purpose is to protect all the American republics against the type of despoliation and slaughter which Hitler has inflicted on Europe.

When the war is over the United States will, of course, withdraw its forces from these bases. But undoubtedly the bases themselves will remain as safeguards against any future aggression. In trying to arouse suspicions in Latin America against the United States, the Nazi propagandists overlook the fact that many of our neighbors are also at war with Hitlerism. In other words, the countries of the Western Hemisphere, with one exception, are acting in concert to resist or to destroy the menace of Naziism. This latest propagandistic attack is likely to strengthen their feeling of solidarity, as the response of the Brazilian Foreign Office has already indicated.

Streamlined OPA

In appealing to members of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee for advice, Price Administrator Prentiss Brown is trying to break down the deep-seated legislative hostility to the OPA that so severely handicapped his predecessor. While he is taking considerable risk in inviting a legislative overhauling of the price-control program, the advantages of a direct approach probably outweigh the dangers. For Congress can, and probably would, checkmate Mr. Brown's best-laid plans if he should persist in adopting policies that it did not approve. The conference method at least holds out hopes of a workable compromise that will have legislative support.

Compromise would be disastrous, however, if it forced Mr. Brown to relinquish the struggle to establish and maintain adequate controls over farm prices. Nor would the sprawling OPA organization be improved by a wholesale dismissal of trained personnel to make way for inexperienced individuals who, for political or other reasons, may be more acceptable to Congress. There is always danger that reorganization undertaken in the name of efficiency and economy may degenerate into a mere patronage grab.

There is real need for simplification of the OPA setup along lines recommended by Senator Danaher, who urges abandonment of attempts to fix prices of countless articles. By limiting control to a relatively few basic commodities vitally affecting living costs, the OPA could function much more efficiently and give the public infinitely more real protection against profiteers with a smaller enforcement personnel than it now has. As The Post has frequently pointed out, the establishment of over-all price controls never had the slightest chance of succeeding, except as an interim device to arrest advances in living costs and pave the way for wage stabilization and control over farm prices. With effective control over basic foods and labor costs still lacking and with no prospect of a taxation and borrowing program capable of mopping up excess purchasing power, the battle against inflation by price decrees has inevitably become a retreat that threatens to become a rout.

The best that Mr. Brown can hope to do is to tighten his lines and be content with less ambitious objectives. Even then his task will be one of incomparable difficulty, unless Congress consents to the imposition of the fundamental controls it has so far stubbornly refused to permit. The bewildering scope of the present OPA program has not only made evasion of the law easy, but its complexity has alienated the public. Given fewer commodities to control and simpler regulatory rules, the public can be relied upon to support and assist the enforcement of OPA orders. In the absence of such public support, adequate enforcement is out of the question, even if Congress were willing to spend vast sums to provide for detection and apprehension of violators of price-control regulations.

Stock Market Rise

Mr. Schram's warning against indiscriminate buying of low-priced stocks is probably sound and may be justified. However, it is questionable whether the president of the New York Stock Exchange should undertake to pass judgment as an expert upon the prices and value of either "cats and dogs" or "blue ribbon" stocks.

An understanding of the stock market calls for a good deal more knowledge than the average commentator possesses. Certainly it is doubtful whether anyone can speak with authority about the causes of the current advance in stock market prices from the low level of a year ago. Apparently the changed military outlook has been an important factor in determining the course of market prices during the past year. The attack on Pearl Harbor, the Japanese conquests in the Southern Pacific area, the onward sweep of Germany toward the east, and the threat to Egypt on the African Front had had a panic-producing effect on investors. And the situation last summer and fall certainly did not justify optimistic assumptions as to the duration or outcome of the war. Furthermore, the Treasury's tax program, despite constructive features, called for excessive levies on business incomes and consequently had a depressing effect on the securities markets.

The halt of the Japanese advance in the Pacific, our successful counterattacks, the recent achievements of Army and Navy aviation and the especially significant successes in the Bismarck Islands area, together with the smashing Russian victories and the launching of the North African offensive, have dispelled the discouragement of a year ago. If there were assurance that the major menace of new German submarines and new German submarine tactics could be overcome in the near future, there would be justification for increased optimism.

After a prolonged period of pessimism the lightening of fears regarding the future has naturally changed the attitude of investors. Instead of preferring to hold surplus funds in liquid form, they have become eager to invest, fearing that investment opportunities outside the Government bond area may become less attractive. For some years past people with investment holdings have hesitated to sell, not knowing what to do with their money. On the other hand, people with cash derived from sales of property or saved out of income have hesitated to buy securities for fear of further declines in values. The changed outlook makes these once reluctant holders of cash more eager to buy, while existing owners of securities have become more reluctant to sell.

The very substantial rise in the better class of securities during the last 10 or 12 months can be largely explained, therefore, by the existence of large cash reserves and limited investment offerings. The public has as a result come to expect further advances. In other words, rising prices have stimulated further rises. Now, as always, this sequence is a characteristic manifestation of stock market psychology. The heavy buying of low-priced securities during the present upswing, which has brought a warning from Mr. Schram, is due in considerable part to existing large margin requirements.

The rising volume of bank credits, carrying with it a threat of inflation, creates fears among investors and leads to hurried and sometimes unwise investment as an alternative to buying Government bonds. Investors are puzzled and uncertain as never before and inclined to act on the basis of emotional impulses rather than to follow the dictates of reason. The situation is the inevitable outcome of the Government's failure to establish firm controls over wages and farm prices and to provide for the effective mobilization of manpower. The weakness of its decisions in all matters affecting these three major problems encourages inflation and creates fears that lead investors to turn from the purchase of Government bonds to the buying of goods and of equities that represent ownership of real property.

Shipping Gains

Secretary Knox's disclosures about new naval and cargo ship construction—and especially his announcement that "several score" of a new kind of small destroyer designed for fighting submarines are already in service—make most welcome news. For although everything seems to suggest that it has taken a more favorable turn, we may be sure that the Battle of the Atlantic is by no means over.

With the steady improvement of the convoy systems in the North Atlantic, the U-boats seem to be turning their attention for the moment to neutral shipping in the South Atlantic. Swedish shipping, it seems, has already been frightened away from those waters completely and a Spanish ship, carrying sugar and wheat from the Argentine to hungry Spain, was sunk February 26 off the Brazilian coast. How many other neutral ships may have gone to the bottom of the South Atlantic has not of course been revealed. But if the submarine terror eventually succeeds in keeping all neutral shipping in port, it would raise some new political and military problems for us. Argentina, for example, would be cut off completely not only from the European markets but also from markets in North and South America. Supplies of food and oil from the Americas and the Indies are now being transported to Spain in Spanish bottoms. Would it then be necessary, because of military or political exigencies, to assign some of our own vessels to these purposes and to divert some of our naval power to protect them?

Secretary Knox's announcement that 2,247,600 deadweight tons of new merchant shipping were constructed in the United States between January 1 and February 28 is interesting in connection with the Nazi claim to have sunk 97,100 tons of United Nations shipping in the first few days of this month. There is, of course, no reason why the least faith should be placed in these German figures, but we may be absolutely certain that they do not err on the side of understatement. Thus just by taking them as a basis for comparison, and making no allowance whatever for British ship construction, it is pretty clear that we are gaining in the battle with the U-boats.

Manpower Committee

There is a very hopeful note in the report that a committee of high officials and advisers to the President are studying the manpower problem. President Roosevelt found this technique to be successful in dealing with the Nation's critical rubber shortage. It is entirely natural that he should resort to the same means of bringing order out of the chaos that surrounds the mobilization of manpower for total war. Indeed, the only surprise occasioned by this report is that the President did not openly assign this problem to a committee of representative experts many months ago.

Apparently this committee is functioning much as the Baruch committee on rubber did. That conclusion may be drawn from the fact that Mr. Baruch occupies a prominent place in its membership, along with Economic Stabilization Director Byrnes, Admiral Leahy, Harry Hopkins and Judge Rosenman. So it appears that the committee cannot be accurately described as a "War Cabinet." A war cabinet would presumably include the heads of the various departments and agencies who are actively directing the war effort on both the military and industrial fronts. Certainly Secretaries Hull, Stimson and Knox would have to be members. No less important would be the inclusion of War Production Chief Nelson, Manpower Chief McNutt, and Food Czar Wickard. In such a cabinet the active directors of the war effort would sit down together and work out plans for full mobilization of our national strength, under the leadership of the President. A very different sort of assignment seems to have been given to this five-man committee consisting of official and unofficial advisers to the President.

Presumably this group of advisers has gone to the roots of the manpower problem. We do not believe that any such distinguished committee would attempt to advise the President, the Congress and the people on this vital issue without thoughtfully examining the manpower demands of the armed forces in relation to the industrial and agricultural requirements of total war. So we may look forward to clarification of this very controversial question. If the committee finds that the Nation can make its greatest contribution to defeat of the Axis by slowing down the induction rate, the Army and Navy will doubtless be required to lower their sights as to manpower requirements. On the other hand, if the committee finds that the Nation has a fair prospect of arming and shipping abroad the proposed army of nearly nine million men, without crippling essential civilian activities, most of the present opposition to the Army plans may be expected to collapse.

It is reasonable to anticipate, too, that any plan to continue the present rapid rate of inductions will be accompanied by a positive program for more effective use of the smaller number of workers to be left on the home front. One conclusion seems inescapable: we cannot attain our maximum strength in war by the present fumbling methods that the War Manpower Commissioner is following. Mr. McNutt has added a constructive touch to his faltering program by ordering more extensive deferment of farmers and opening the way for a hit-or-miss back-to-the-farm movement. But that improvement is more than offset by the general bogging down of manpower controls devised by the WMC without the backing of legislative authority or much-needed appropriations. So the whole country will be relieved to hear that a new approach to the manpower problem is being made. And much will be expected of the five-man committee.

TROUBLE

Would you believe
That the greatest trouble
Comes to the man
Who sees things double?

He multiplies
His two-edged fate,
Twice by love
And twice by hate,

And so prepared
To battle strife
There is no laughter
In this man's life.

No rain for friend,
No sun for brother—
He'll drown in the one,
And burn in the other.

MINNA GELLERT

Farmers Discouraged

By Mark Sullivan

Production Will Lag

THE DATE can be fixed when official Washington woke up to the crisis about food production the coming summer. On March 6, Manpower Commissioner McNutt issued a hurried and belated order—that farmers be deferred in the draft. This will be a help, but only a slight and partial one. And it comes late.

Up to the first week of March, the attitude of Washington officials about food production had been confident. They reproached persons who cried warning. They had set a goal for this year's production—8 per cent above last year's crops—and they thought the goal would be met.

Last week, however, Washington began to receive reports from some 3000 county agents of the Agriculture Department. These predicted alarming reductions of spring planting. Upon receipt of these reports, Secretary of Agriculture Wickard, questioned by a Senate committee, said, with obvious concern and reluctance, that the prospect of getting production even equal to last year's "doesn't look very good now."

ACTUALLY, the prospect is more serious than the statistics show—this is a field in which the statistics lag materially behind the facts. The survey by county agents of the Agriculture Department was made in February, when there was still time for farmers to plan their spring planting, and farmers still hoped that steps would be taken at Washington to relieve their handicaps—which are mainly shortage of labor and shortage of farm machinery. Today the time for planting is close at hand. In the interval, no helpful step was accomplished at Washington, until Mr. McNutt's order of March 6 deferring farmers in the draft.

Throughout February proposals to cure the farm situation encountered opposition and delay. Proposals that farmers be deferred, and that farmers already in the Army be released, had opposition from Army heads. The Administration proposal of a subsidy to farmers had opposition from farm leaders, suspicious of the increased Government control which would accompany a subsidy. The proposals about organizing volunteer town persons to work on farms encounter skepticism from the farmers, who doubt its practicality. All the proposals, except the one about deferring farmers, are still in suspension. The truth is the farmers' chief handicap — lack of workers because of high wages paid in industry—is deeply rooted in the Administration policy about labor, going back several years. Any present practical and sufficient remedy is difficult to envisage.

It is probable the reduction of food supplies will be even more serious than is now belatedly realized. A large contributing factor is the farmers' psychology, a thing not subject to statistics. These March days, as the sun warms the soil, the instinct of every farmer is to plow and plant, to the limit. But this year the farmer is discouraged, indignant. The mood is reflected in letters to this writer from practically every part of the country.

From Ottumwa, Iowa, a farmer-owner writes in a spirit of patient resignation to a somber and ominous condition: "Farmers are quitting farming in this locality. That does not mean that these farms will stand idle, but it does mean that production on these farms will be down. I employ two men, with myself part time. Last year we milked 13 cows, raised 100 hogs and 13 calves. Now one man will work our farm this coming season and he will do just what he can and that is all there will be to it. Our neighbors up and down the road for miles are experiencing the same thing . . . Something that we never have experienced before is happening in the corn belt."

THE SPIRIT of a letter from Cedarville, Ohio, is indignation. In nearby cities, industrial plants doing Government work "are paying wages to 10 and 12 dollars a day." Because farmers cannot pay such wages, farms are drained of help. As a result, in a single county, 2000 acres of last year's crop of soybeans are still unharvested, and 20,000 acres of corn. "And farmers are now asked to plant more . . . I have a herd of milking shorthorns. We have dropped out of milk production and are letting the calves have the whole milk. In 10 months they will bring $150 each. Think how much milk it takes to bring that amount at the local farm price of $2.70 a hundred pounds.

This last point may not be clear to city folks. It means that the price received for beef is so high, and that received for milk so low, that dairymen feed their milk to calves in order to make beef of them. The effect on milk supply for cities is bound to be grave. The time is late for remedy. To a farmer who in mid-March has not yet been able to arrange for help for the season, or has not yet surmounted the red tape and delay involved in getting more farm machinery, the die is cast.

Bomb War Of Nerves

By Paul Schubert

The Blitz In Reverse

RECENT bombings of Germany and German-occupied Europe have been a striking demonstration of technical progress in aerial warfare. To bomb Berlin, British planes must fly several times as far as German planes flew in the 1940 blitz on London—yet in a concentrated 30-minute bombing British planes are able to dump twice the bomb-tonnage on Berlin that German planes dropped in 8 or 10 hours during the blitz.

What this means in terms of technical evolution is almost beyond the grasp of the layman. New, bigger and better planes, improved engines, progress in operation, in navigation, in airdrome facilities, in skill of personnel—one of these Berlin blastings is a performance that might well have been called "impossible" only two years ago. In all truth it was impossible then—but 1943 is a new and history-making year.

The 1940 blitz on London and other British cities was essentially war of nerves. The Germans did go after some targets of military value—docks, railway yards, industrial objects. But they didn't concentrate on such targets. They gave the impression, rather, that their military targets were only a pretext for a widespread general assault on much more vulnerable clusters of dwellings. The whole nature of the German attack implied the belief that the British people would crack under the loss, strain and horror of the blitz—would sue for peace to put an end to terror.

THE GERMAN blitz failed to accomplish this end, partly because British nerves are pretty strong, partly because the British bomb-shelters reduced loss of life to a figure lower than anyone anticipated, and partly because British people stayed out of their dugouts to fight incendiaries and put out fires.

And since the Germans had neglected targets of military value, they didn't even get the benefit of a reduced British war production.

Germany's air attack was badly conceived, and failed.

The present British bombing of German objectives is not war of nerves. It is a very carefully calculated, methodical onslaught upon German war production and German war transportation. It is pointed in particular at German U-boat production and U-boat operation. The bomb-tonnages dropped are based upon experiment and experience, and are intended to do irreparable damage—what isn't accomplished on one visit is made good on follow-up bombings.

This "pattern" of bombing guarantees military results.

As a secondary result, the British bombings must have a profound effect upon German nerves.

The German civil population feels the bombings directly. In the cities most heavily attacked, the civil population has been evacuated—sent to other parts of Germany, not only bearing tales of destruction and disaster, but acting as direct evidence of the assault upon their own cities.

In other places, such as Berlin, the bombings have still the nature of "unfinished business." When will the R. A. F. return? What section of the city will get it next? Is it wiser to send the wife and children to the country—if so, where, and what will become of papa, who can't leave his desk in the Reichsministerium for administering this or that—

But war is war, and all Germans have known for many months that war means bombing. Human beings have an extraordinary capacity to rise above adversity and physical hardship. Very likely war of nerves is a much overrated phenomenon, as applied to masses of people, and we might wait a long time indeed to see the German people cry out spontaneously for a peace of German surrender.

THE REAL WAR of nerves is more apt to strike in another quarter—that highest quarter. Right at Hitler and his inner circle of advisers.

These men embarked upon the war, back in 1939, because they felt confident of winning. One reason why they felt confident was a belief in the superiority of the German Luftwaffe. For a long time the experience of the war can only have heightened their confidence—swollen it to an insane and haughty belief in their own invincibility.

Britain's 1943 bombings of German targets are a display of British strength—comeback strength. Just as Russia's performance is currently a display of Russian comeback strength.

At some moment, this year, one of the British bombings must penetrate Hitler's confidence and sow seeds of fear and doubt. From then onward Hitler's decline may well be swift.

Italians In U. S.

The Albert Hamilton letter published Saturday, February 20, on the disillusionment of the Italian-Americans in the policy followed by our Government in uniting them to defeat the Axis cannot go unanswered. As an Italian-American and a leader of a union whose membership includes a large number of Italian-Americans I feel more than qualified to speak for this group.

As indicated by the ruling of the Justice Department that Italian aliens would not be subject to wartime restrictions as are all other enemy aliens, the vast majority of Italian-Americans are anti-Fascist.

They know that "unconditional surrender" of the Axis powers will not only lift the shadow of oppression from their shoulders here in America, but in Italy the people will be freed from actual slavery. Then and only then will the Italians, being rid of Hitler and Mussolini and their cohorts, be able to direct their destinies as free people.

As to the unity and cooperation necessary to achieve victory, our Commander in Chief, President Roosevelt, has indicated its quality. In commenting on some remarks made by General Giraud in North Africa to the effect that unity of the French forces must be based on willingness and determination to fight Hitler, no matter whether the Frenchman were a member of the Sol or the other end of the political scene—a Communist, President Roosevelt commented that that was not a bad policy for any country to follow at the present time.

Hoarding

I can't recall an incident which aroused my ire so much as one related in this morning's paper about the declaration of 1219 surplus cans by a registrant at the Adams School.

For the past several months we housewives have been "propagandized" thoroughly, and rightly so, by radio, newspapers, etc., as to the evils of hoarding. It has been impressed upon us that hoarding helps the Axis; that one of the greatest aids to the war effort which we housewives can render is to buy only what we need when we need it. With this neither I nor any right-thinking housewife have any quarrel. We are indeed fortunate in comparison not only to the conquered peoples of the earth but even to our Allies, in the quantities and varieties of foodstuffs still available to us.

Roll Of Dishonor

The following measures would put a stop to absenteeism and illegal interference with the war effort by wildcat strikes:

1. Establish the rule that where time and a half is paid for overtime, the worker will be docked time and a half for inexcusable absence.
2. Have the President of the United States establish a national roll of dishonor upon which would be entered the names of those who hamper the war effort by illegal strikes, slowdowns, threats to workers, etc.
3. Make it a violation of law to do any of the things which would be cause for entering a man's name on the roll of dishonor and fix the penalty high.
4. Announce that prosecutions under such law will be suspended until after the war and that then violators of the law would be tried by juries of returning soldiers, the men who were fighting in mud, heat or sleet while they were being knifed in the back by a small minority at home.

Praises Health Center

In this epoch of much criticism of men and institutions, permit me to speak through The Post a commendatory word concerning the Southwest Health Center of our city, located at Delaware Avenue and I Street Southwest. It has been my privilege to do research and survey work at this focal station of our District Health Department, for the past year. I regret that circumstances do not permit my continuance there. But in my reviewing the work done by the some seven clinics of the institution, my enthusiasm for the workers there gives an urge to call public attention to the same.

The center is a veritable beehive of service. And no bees ever went about labor with more cheerful industry. It is an almost hourly experience to see one clinic full of crying babies and chatting mothers, and another, nearby, lined up with men receiving "shots" in their arms, while in numerous small rooms are practiced, capable, white-clad nurses questioning and diagnosing patients. In whatever clinic one enters, the same cheerful, efficient service is met. I have never heard, in one year, one discordant or seriously complaining note, although no workshop is more busily employed. It was like a bath in good humor to enter this Health Center to begin a day's work. Quitting time and payday were each subordinated to duty.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Canned Goods, Etc.

He—How did you finish with the grocer in today's shopping?

She—I had him by five points in the first period, but then I got a terrible break. After I had made a 50-yard run for 12 cans of asparagus, 9 cans were ruled illegal on the ground my backfield was in motion.

He—I know a woman who ran up 23 points over her grocer in the first 10 minutes of play and had to give up everything, but a jar of marmalade for unnecessary roughness. What are we having for lunch, dear?

She—You're getting about 11 points.

He—Eleven points of what?

She—I don't know. I've got 20 minutes yet to hear from OPM.

He—That was a nice breakfast we had. The red coupon one, wasn't it?

She—Yes, that was my red coupon special breakfast combination with buttered toast a la Prentiss Brown.

He—In other words no butter. The Jenks are coming to dinner. I hope we will have something nice for them.

She—Oh yes, I've taken care of that. We're having some coffee I've been saving since November 8, 1942.

He—Immediately after saying grace I'll read the penalty for that. I think it's 10 years and $10,000.

She—What lovely penalties they're putting out with the groceries this year?

He—Yes indeed, much better than last season. By the way, dear, there's something I want to speak to you about. I don't want to be an old crab, but really. . . .

She—Don't fumble so. What is it?

He—Well, er, it's all right to want food, of course and er, er, that is to say I suppose every woman did a lot of last minute shopping but, er——

She—Oh, out with it! What's bothering you.

He—Well, after all, I can't take a bath when the tub is full of canned tuna fish!

She—I had to put it somewhere.

He—And my clothes closet . . . when I opened the door to get a fresh suit a hundred cans of meatloaf fell on me. Pretty trying, you know.

She—Dear, it was careless of me.

He—Oh, I can overlook all that. Food is food and we've got to live. But I draw the line on my medicine cabinet. Don't look innocent. You know all about it. I got up in the night in the dark for my cough medicine and drank half a can of canned vegetable juices. But that isn't the worst of it. Look at my head.

She—Why, my dear, you're all blood!

He—Not quite. I reached for my hair tonic and what do you think I found? CATSUP!

"What are you getting to a can of soup these days anyhow?" asked a husband the other day.

"About five plates," said the wife.

"You've got to get a leaner mixture," snapped hubby.

Elmer denies he sent a can of spinach to have it recapped.

"Are you the Leatherneck type?" we asked a girl-friend about to join the Lady Marines.

"No," she replied. "That's just where my throat got chapped."

"I have a right to feel that destiny has chosen me for this great task. Without it I could not have borne the sorrows which perhaps would have broken down countless less strong characters."—Adolf Hitler.

Listen, Ajax: All that happened to you was that you got to monkeying with the buzz saw.

"You have learned fanaticism from me. Accept my assurance that the same fanaticism still inspires me and that it will never leave me," Adolf continued in his recent speech to his Munich playmates.

Or liberally translated, "I'm nuts and I'm proud of it."

Persecuted Teachers

Little by little stories filter through of cruelties inflicted by the Nazis upon educators in the occupied, enslaved nations. Before me lies one which tells about those who refused to teach their pupils the "glories" of national socialism. Such teachers were required to remain motionless in difficult positions for a long time. These patriots were forbidden to receive any letter or package, were completely isolated from the world.

Now such cruelties are not something entirely new. There had been organized in Germany, prior to World War I, several societies which demanded that the Fatherland be given its "place in the sun." This was when Admiral von Koester created the Flottenverein, or Navy League. Another organization's slogan was "Wir Muessen Kolonien" (We must have colonies). In those days, German educators who refused to teach the young "Weltmacht" also were persecuted.

Americans should remember all this when talk comes of a soft peace. This is more than a war started by a few gangsters. The theory of "Weltmacht" has become nation-wide. We must be alert as to Nazi use of blundering idealists here. It might be well to commence by ending dual citizenship.

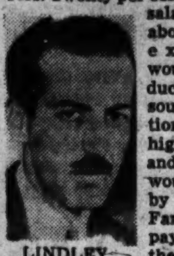
An Improvement

By Ernest K. Lindley

The Revised House Tax Plan

THE REVISED pay-as-you-earn plan of the House Ways and Means subcommittee is an improvement over its predecessors. Twenty per cent of wage and salary payments, above personal exemptions, would be deducted at the source. The additional tax on higher salaries and other income would be paid by quarters. Farmers would pay two-thirds of their tax before the end of the calendar year in which the income was earned, and the remainder in the following March.



LINDLEY

These three steps would put nearly the entire personal income tax on a pay-as-you-earn basis beginning July 1. This would be an important reform—one which should have come shortly after Pearl Harbor, if not earlier. But if this is done, there must be some measure of relief from payment of taxes on income earned in 1942. Payment of two taxes simultaneously would be impossible for many wage and salary earners. The House subcommittee ducked a decision of this question but its members acknowledged that one would have to be made.

THE SIMPLEST solution would be to count the tax obligation on 1942 income as discharged by the payments made during the first two quarters of 1943. After that, the tax would be collected as the money is earned. The tax on income received during the second six months of 1943 would be paid during those months. The entire tax on income received during 1944 would be paid in 1944. Theoretically, this would involve also the "forgiveness" of half the tax on 1943 income. But most taxpayers would not know the difference. They would keep right on paying taxes, without interruption. When they died, they would have a little more money—at least in theory—because their income tax would be paid up to date. The tax on their final year's income would not have to be paid out of their estates. In the case of persons with large investments, much of the revenue theoretically "lost" by pushing the tax clock ahead would be collected by the Treasury through income taxes in ensuing years and by estate taxes.

The Treasury, however, objects to letting estates be enlarged, especially during time of war, by "skipping" tax payments. In this, the Treasury is more concerned about psychological effects than revenue. The Canadian tax program meets this problem by a compromise in its new pay-as-you-earn tax program. In moving the tax clock ahead, the tax on earned income is "forgiven" and also on the first $300 of investment income. The tax on larger investment income is deferred until death: it is added to the estate tax.

Every objection, hypothetical or actual, to "forgiving" income tax payments for one year can be overcome by raising the rates. The important objective is to get the personal income tax on a pay-as-you-earn basis, by moving the tax clock ahead. As a practical matter, this cannot be done without canceling most or all of the tax due for the preceding year.

THE REVISED House subcommittee plan is an improvement over its predecessors because it provides not only for a substantial collection at the source by deductions from wages and salaries but for the payment of the tax on other income by quarters as it is received. However, it is cumbersome because it calls for two separate sets of personal exemptions: One for the Victory tax and another for the personal income tax.

A second objection is that the deduction proposed, of 20 per cent, after personal exemptions, is not large enough. An additional 10 to 15 per cent in the form of a compulsory saving, or tax to be refunded after the war, would bring the deduction closer to the amount needed to keep purchasing power and the supply of civilian goods and services within speaking distance of each other. As under the Victory tax, other forms of approved savings such as war bonds and life insurance premiums, could be used as offsets against the refundable portion of the tax.

For several years, the Federal tax program has suffered from a lag in thought and action. The taxation we get is, roughly, the kind we should have had a year or two earlier. The signs that the personal income tax is at last about to be put on a pay-as-you-earn basis are encouraging, but this step in itself will not establish a sound war tax program.

Liechtenstein Revives Ancient Pomp for Royal Wedding

By the Associated Press

Vaduz, Liechtenstein, March 7.—Franz Joseph II, reigning prince of the little principality of Liechtenstein, was married today to Princess Gina Wilczek of Austria in a ceremony which transformed this little country situated in the heart of war-torn Europe into a fairyland for a day.

The prince, a 36-year-old cousin of Archduke Otto of Hapsburg, met his 21-year-old bride when they lived in adjacent castles in Austria.

All the pomp and ceremony of royalty and of medieval days was revived as most of the 11,102 persons living in the country's 65 square miles turned out for the celebration. Liechtenstein lies between Germany and Switzerland.

The carriage procession was led by an armored guard of honor and followed by most of the country's population.

Part of the national celebration was a torchlight parade, lifting Europe's blackout in this small spot.

Flowers and red and blue bunting adorned the streets. A great illuminated family coat of arms burned from a hill 1000 feet above the town tonight as the merrymakers carried on. A jewel casket of beaten silver was the country's gift to the bride.

The marriage ceremony was held in the forenoon in a Catholic church. Austrian Count Ferdinand of Wilczek gave the bride away. She is described as a "popular member of the younger aristocratic set" of Vienna.

Londoners Plaster 'Bombs for Hitler' With War Stamps

London, March 7 (AP).—Thousands of Londoners, and American soldiers too, from a crowd of about a million pushing through Trafalgar Square, bought savings stamps today and plastered them on two 500-pound bombs in the square "for delivery to Hitler."

The biggest London crowds since the Coronation packed the square in a great rally to buy savings stamps and certificates in the second day of the capital's "Wings for Victory" week. The government hopes to raise 600 million dollars in the week.

Christians Held Bound to Fight For Freedom

Because freedom is God-made, and not man-made, Christians have a special obligation to work and fight for its preservation, Dr. Ralph Dela Smith said yesterday.

He spoke at Woodside Methodist Church, Silver Spring, Md., where he was welcomed by his flock after a six-week illness.

"Our biggest problem in this world today as Christians," he stated, "is whether or not we will be able to dig deep enough to build our foundations upon the things that count."

How To Kill Hostages

Nazis Particular

By Homer Bigart

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

London, March 7.—The correct Wehrmacht procedure for the execution of civilian hostages is outlined in a remarkable German military document that has fallen into British hands.

Mass executions must be carried out in "a very military manner," the order states. Firing squads should be guided as follows:

"A. When a large number of persons have to be dealt with they are to be distributed for shooting among units.

"B. The bodies are to be buried in sufficiently deep graves. Burning of bodies is to cease. The placing of flowers on graves is to be prevented.

At Edges of Graves

"C. In order to avoid unnecessary contact with the bodies, those to be shot are to be led directly to the edges of their graves. In the case of mass executions it is allowable to cause the hostages to kneel with their faces towards the graves.

"D. Shooting of large numbers is to be carried out in groups of five to eight, one after the other. Those to be shot have to have their legs tied.

"E. Before the execution takes place, those to be shot should have all papers removed. A short report is to be made on the execution, showing: names of those shot; reasons for shooting; name of officer in charge; place; time; name of officer ordering the execution.

Final Shot to Make Sure

'F. The execution is to be carried out in a very regimental manner with an officer in charge, two to four men to be detailed for each man to be shot. Aim for the heart and head. After the volley the officer responsible will, on orders from the medical officer detailed to attend, fire a final shot into the body of each with the regulation pistol. Death is to be certified by the medical officer.

"G. Articles of clothing (including footwear) and personal effects of those shot, will, on no account, be given to the local population. They are to be handed in to the appropriate local military authority in exchange for a receipt. One officer is to be present until the burial has been completed."

Catholic Church Head in Britain Praises Russians

London, March 7 (AP).—Arthur Cardinal Hinsley, head of the Catholic Church in England, praised the Russians in a lenten pastoral message made public today.

Describing them as a people "now engaged in heroically defending their hearths and homes against the invader," the message continued:

"For Russia we plead daily in our prayers after mass. Let us redouble our prayers now, that the age-old devotion of the Russian people to the mother of God in so many of their hearts, may earn for them her special protection in these days and restore them soon to union with her divine son."

YOUR FEDERAL INCOME TAX

No. 153

When, Where, And How

Taxes due on a return filed for the calendar year 1942 may be paid in full at the time for the filing of the return on or before March 15, 1943. The tax may, at the option of the taxpayer, be paid in four equal installments instead of in a single payment, in which case the first installment is to be paid on or before March 15, the second on or before June 15, the third on or before September 15, and the fourth on or before December 15, 1943. If the taxpayer elects to pay his tax in four installments, each of the four installments must be equal in amount, but any installment may be paid, at the election of the taxpayer, prior to the time prescribed for its payment. If an installment is not paid in full on or before the date fixed for its payment, the whole amount of the tax remaining unpaid is required to be paid upon notice and demand for the collector.

The tax must be paid to the collector of Internal Revenue for the district in which the taxpayer's return is required to be filed—that is, to the collector for the district in which is located the taxpayer's legal residence or principal place of business, or if he has no legal residence or principal place of business in the United States, then to the collector of Internal Revenue at Baltimore, Md.

In the payment of taxes a fractional part of a cent is to be disregarded unless it amounts to ½-cent or more, in which case it shall be increased to 1-cent.

The tax due, if any, should be paid in cash at the collector's office, or by check or money order payable to "Collector of Internal Revenue." In the case of payment in cash, the taxpayer should in every instance require and the collector should furnish a receipt. In the case of payments made by check or money order, however, the canceled check or money order receipt is usually a sufficient receipt.

Library of Congress Issues Album of American Folk Songs

By Helene Champlain
Post Staff Writer

"When I was a young girl, I used to see pleasure,
When I was a young girl, I used to drink ale;
Out of a alehouse into a jailhouse
Right out of a barroom and down to my grave."

No lament of one of Scott Fitzgerald's lost generation is this plaintive verse, for all its contemporary connotations. The said discovery of the fact that "the wages of sin is death" was instead a soldier in an ancient Irish ballad, whose verse was brought overseas in the traditional manner to become an American folk song. New England and Southern folk singers adopted it, called it "One Morning in May" and, in a curious commentary on womanhood, changed the sex of the luckless imbiber. Cowboys took the refrain into the West as "The Cowboy's Lament," while Negroes fashioned of it "St. James Infirmary Blues."

This musical metamorphosis has been traced for the archive of folk song of the Library of Congress, where some 30,000 other traditional numbers are preserved on records under the supervision of Dr. Benjamin Botkin, assistant in charge, and Recording Engineer John Langenegger.

Popular Albums

Mindful that students and folklorists are not the only ones who might enjoy oral Americana, the archive has chosen the mournful ballad, along with 119 other titles, to represent the best in its files in a group of albums for popular consumption. So now the college girl may hear the piping voices and laughter of backwoods school children as they sing their rhythmic game song, "Pullin' the Skiff:"

"Tomorrow, tomorrow,
Tomorrow never come;
Tomorrow, tomorrow,
Tomorrow's in the barn . . ."

And the flush business man may hear a mountaineer's version of the Orpheus legend, "The Farmer's Curst Wife:"

"The old woman went whistlin'
over the hill,
The devil wouldn't have me, so I wonder who will? . . .
This is what a woman can do:
She can outdo the devil and her old man, too . . .
There's one advantage women have over men:
They can go to Hell and come back again."

Although the archive's files date back only a decade, the songs therein are century or two old, handed down in both melody and words from generation to generation. "Barbara Allen," which is represented several dozen times in the library collection, has been popular for at least 200 years with its familiar theme of love leading to death:

A white rose grew on William's grave,
A red rose grew on Barbry's;
They twined and they twined in a true-lover's knot,
A-warnin' young people to marry.

Search for Ballads

To obtain the voices of the people, at their source, the archive supports groups of ballad hunters who roam the backwoods country to capture American musical culture on records. First of the searches for native music was made by John Lomax, honorary curator of the archive, who fathered the collection, and his son, Alan Lomax.

In the summer of 1933 the pair made a collecting trip through the Negro prisons of the South to record the rhythmical work songs of the men. Most striking records of the collection, the work ballads embody the strength of the men, carry the sound of their swinging tools. There is "Long John," for instance, on which the axes resound against wood in the second syllable of each line:

Well, long John,
He's long gone,
He's long gone.
Mister John, John,
Old Big-eye John . . .

There are songs of historical significance, too, celebrating the closing of the mines at Coal Creek, Tenn., scene of several disasters:

Pay day, pay day, O pay day,
Pay day don't come to Coal Creek no more.

Or the attack of Sioux Indians on an emigrant train crossing the plains to the West:

I'll sing you a song and it'll be a sad one
Of our trials and our troubles and how they begun . . .
We heard of Sioux Indians all out on the plains,
A-killin' poor drivers and burnin' their trains. . ."

And then there are the voices of many other people of America . . . lumberjacks telling of log-hauling contests, sailors chanting chanties, fiddlers creating the tempo for square dances, Negroes improvising spirituals, Indians shouting at ceremonial dances.

Lycoming Sets Engine Production Record

New York, March 7 (AP).—Production of Lycoming aircraft engines during 1942 broke all previous records, William F. Wise, executive vice President of the Aviation Corporation, said today.

Rate of production at the end of the year was twice that of a year before, Wise said, adding that then it was at an all-time high.

He announced that during the past year one of Lycoming's aircraft engines was converted for use in light tanks and other tank force mobile equipment.

Rep. Luce Accepts White House Invitation, Attacks WPB, WMC

Bridgeport, Conn., March 7.—Representative Clare Boothe Luce (Republican) of Connecticut responding today to an invitation extended by the President to the 120 new members of the House to call at the White House on March 10, said that the Congress was "deeply alarmed by the many disquieting and even explosive circumstances that face us on the home front."

In a letter to the President, which she made public today, Mrs. Luce said that she assumed the President had invited the freshman members of the House to the White House "to learn what we are thinking."

"So, while accepting your cordial invitation, I take the opportunity to tell what is on my mind," she wrote. "I believe the 425,000 people I represent in Fairfield County would be happy to have me do so."

Foremost "among the fears that haunt us," Mrs. Luce wrote the President are these:

"That the conflict between the military program and the farm program may cause serious, if not disastrous, food shortages:

"That the aggravating muddling of the Manpower Commission, which does not seem to have yet done the elementary arithmetic of finding out how many men and women are needed by whom and for what and where they can be got, may lead to a calamitious cramping of war industry:

"That the protracted wrangling and vacillating authority in the War Production Board may yet take its toll on the battlefield."

"And in all frankness," Mrs. Luce added, "let me say that to us in Congress has been transferred, as if by swift contagion, the people's long delayed fury against the swollen and wasteful Washington bureaucracies that have burgeoned through the years."

Equal Rights For Women

Debated On Forum

Whether an equal rights amendment to the Constitution would enlarge upon or further restrict the economic, political and civil rights of women was vigorously debated last night on the American Forum of the Air, broadcast over the Mutual network from the Shoreham Hotel.

Proponents of such an amendment were Dr. Lena Madesin Phillips, international president of the Professional and Business Women's Clubs, and Miss Molly Maloney, a New York member of the International Brotherhood of Bookbinders, A. F. L. Opposing them were Miss Susan B. Anthony 2d, Washington Star reporter, and Miss Gertrude Lane, general organizer of the Hotel and Restaurant Workers Union, A. F. L.

Would Be Displeased

Miss Anthony, a grand niece of Susan B. Anthony, opined that her distinguished ancestor must be turning over in her grave because of the use of her name made by equal rights amendment advocates. Actually, said Miss Anthony, the famous worker for women's rights "fought for the very protection in State laws for working women that this bill (equal rights) would eliminate. Aunt Susan struggled to raise the level of all who were oppressed, whether it was for race, sex or economic class."

Her views were echoed by Miss Lane, who agreed that women "want equality—real equality—but not the illusion of equality that this amendment offers."

The equal rights amendment, now before the judiciary committees of both houses, is needed to wipe out discriminations existing in State legislation, contended Dr. Phillips, who has campaigned 20 years for the amendment. In that time, she said, fewer than 150 such discriminations have been wiped out.

1000 Discriminations

"There are tonight in the law of the land more than 1000 common law discriminations against women. It woud take 150 years to remove them all at that rate."

Specific cases were cited by Miss Maloney, who recalled that New York women, in her trade, first were barred from the night shift and the higher wages paid for after-dark work. Later, she said, a law was passed preventing women from working overtime.

"It is all right," she said, "for the Legislature to decide the conditions of work for children, but adult women who have sense enough to learn a skilled trade have sense enought to take care of themselves."

Preacher Guards War Plant to Help Lift Church Debt

Milwaukee, March 7 (AP).—Preacher Hal E. Norton is doubling in brass, guarding a war plant in his spare time and using his wages to help pay off the $5000 church mortgage.

Six out of seven nights the pastor of the Roundy Memorial Baptist Church in Whitefish Bay, Wis., reports for duty at the Smith Steel Foundry Co. here.

On Saturday night he rests for church duties. Sunday evening services over, he begins his week of guard duty.

Red War Reports True

Rules Of Censorship Liberal

(One of a series.)

By Henry C. Cassidy
Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, March 7.—The news you read from the Soviet Union is as accurate as any that can be given from a great country at war.

I have been asked repeatedly, since my return to New York: Can we believe the Moscow stories?

For the Associated Press bureau, and, I think, for the rest of the press corps in Moscow, I can say that the correspondents are satisfield that their reports are substantially reliable.

They do not always tell the whole story, and the figures may sometimes be out of line, but in general, what they say is true.

The sources of information are exceptionally trustworthy. They are the Soviet press, official communiques and eye-witness observation.

The greatest single source is the newspaper Krasnaya Zvezda, or Red Star, official organ of the commissariat of defense. It is not circulated generally, but is destined for Red army officers and men.

Invariably Accurate

Red Star carries brief dispatches from its own correspondents on current action, and long, instructive articles by high officers on military problems. These writers are not trying to fool their own men. Their reports are invariably accurate.

Pravda, organ of the central committee of the Communist Party, and Izvestia, organ of the Supreme Soviet, are the other principal newspapers. They have official backing for what they say.

They publish more general, descriptive articles for their millions of readers. Each prints four pages daily, the first devoted to an editorial and communiques, the last to foreign news and the two inside pages to dispatches from their correspondents.

Issued Noon and Night

The communiques are issued each noon and night. Copies are handed to foreign correspondents in the ground-floor press room of the foreign commissariat at about the same time they are delivered to Soviet news offices and broadcast by Moscow radio.

This winter, the communiques have consisted of a page, listing points recaptured by the Red army, and several pages of details on individual operations. There is no case known to Moscow correspondents of a false Soviet claim to capture of any point.

When German counter-attacks have resulted in recapture of points, the Soviet authorities do not make misleading statements about such action, but usually lapse into silence on that operation. Such silences are understood by the Russian people.

During the battle of Moscow, I had an opportunity to check on figures given by the communique, which estimated 750 German vehicles were destroyed along the road of Volokolamsk. Driving down that road, I counted more than 1000 wrecked tanks, trucks and cars.

Hitler Habit Cited

I asked a Red army officer why the figure had been underestimated, and he replied: "Hitler overestimates, and look what happened to him."

Figures on enemy casualties, however, sometimes seem to correspondents to be overestimated. This was particularly so early in the war, when German losses were estimated at one million a month, at a time when the Red army was retreating. Now that the Russians are advancing, and they have more opportunity to confirm their estimates, correspondents consider the figures more reliable.

The correspondents have made eight group visits to the front. The first was to the Yelnia sector, west of Moscow, in September, 1941. There were three to the Moscow front in the winter of 1941-42, one to the Rzhev front last August, and three so far this winter to the Stalingrad front, the City of Stalingrad and the Ukraine.

After Victory

They are permitted on the front only after the Red army has won a victory and consolidated its new positions. They do not see actual combat. But they are able to inspect the scenes of battle, and talk with officers and men who participated in the action.

In addition to these main sources of news, the correspondents sometimes have interviews with Soviet authorities, arranged through the foreign commissariat or the Soviet Information Bureau, and make infrequent trips to cities or training centers in the rear.

Solomon Lozovsky, vice-commissar of foreign affairs and assistant chief of the Sovinformburo, under Alexander Shcherbakov, no longer holds the press conferences he began early in the war. He is staying in Kuibyshev, dealing with Far Eastern affairs, while the correspondents' headquarters are in Moscow, Nikolai Palgunov, former Tass correspondent in Paris, heads the press sectitotn of the foreign commissariat.

Censored by Two Men

Two young men censor all the dispatches sent from Moscow. They are Pietr Anurov, former press attache at Tokio, and Viktor Kozhemiako, former secretary of embassy at Chungking. Theirs is a 12-hour day, seven-day week job, going through the telegrams of a score of correspondents.

The censorship, which was the strictest of any before the war, sometimes limiting dispatches entirely to what appeared in the Soviet press, is now among the most liberal. The censors watch for information which might aid or give comfort to the enemy, and also for any that might be misleading or incorrect in their opinion.

But any article which seems to them a reasonable interpretation of the facts given by the Soviet press or communique, or witnessed at the front, is permitted to pass.

The correspondents now have comparatively few quarrels with the censors. Their quarrel is in trying to get more news from the source.

Gen. Brereton's Son Heads 1 of New Va. Parole Districts

Richmond, Va., March 7 (AP).—The creation of two more probation-parole districts and appointments of district officers were announced here yesterday by William Shands Meacham, chairman of the Virginia Parole Board.

Lewis Hyde Brereton, 29, son of Maj. Gen. Lewis H. Brereton, commander of United States forces in the Middle East, has been named probation-parole officer for District No. 8, in the Charlottesville area.

Edgar Rhea Beverly, 46, of Tazewell, will serve as district officer for District 19, which includes four counties in southwest Virginia.

Konieszewski Only Colonial on All-S. C. Team; Rice, McCluskey Bid for World Marks Tonight

C. U. Games Draw Crack Trackmen

Tenth Annual Event At Uline Arena; Record Field to Compete in Meet

By Al Costello
Post Staff Writer

Greg Rice, whose barrel-chest has snapped the tape in front of the world's greatest runners for 60 straight races, tonight will bid for a new 2½ mile record as Catholic University's Tenth Annual Track and Field meet is presented at Uline Arena at 8 p. m.

The former Notre Dame flyer, who now runs under the banner of the New York Athletic Club, heads an elite field of world famous trackmen, including, among others, Lieut. Joe McCluskey, holder of 25 world and national marks, and four newly crowned I. C.-4 A. champions who only Saturday night won their titles in Madison Square Garden.

McCluskey, the former Fordham all-time great, and one of the world's greatest marathon runners, will run in direct competition with the great Rice. Both are entered in the Touchdown Club's 2½ mile invitation run, along with Dave Williams, Georgetown's great runner. Arthur Schmidlein, N. Y. A. C.; Curtis and Lewis Stone, Penn State's brother combination, and Frank Wright, of Stonewall Democratic Club, of Baltimore.

Remember Last Year?

Last year, at Riverside, those who saw it will ever forget the duel McCluskey and Rice staged as both crossed the finish line inches apart and each with times that surpassed the old 2½ world mark of Taisto Maki's. Rice it was who was the winned with the new world record of 11:32.6 after McClusey had led most of the way and who really pushed Rice to such an extent that he had to give his all to even win, much less set a new world mark.

Tonight should be no exception. McCluskey is in the best condition of his life after his extensive and strenous naval training at Chapel Hill, N. C. He has promised Rice the race of his life.

The 2½-mile feature will go on promptly at 10:10 p. m.

The newly crowned I. C.-4 A. champions who will compete are Bill Vessie, Columbia University's high jumper who set a new meet record with a leap of 6 feet 7½ inches; Joe Nowicki of Fordham, who won the "1000;" Gerald Karver of Penn State, who was runner-up, and Bob Stuart of Fordham, 600-yard champion.

Griffith Deserves Credit

From a shaky start with an appropriation so small it would have discouraged an ordinary mortal, 10 years ago in the confined Catholic University gym, Dorsey Griffith, C. U. track mentor. has nursed this met along with almost fantastic ardor. To his everlasting credit, hard work and unselfish devotion to an ideal, the meet is rightfully big-time now.

Other outstanding entries include the national champion Brooklyn Prep 1-mile relay team and the 1-mile relay teams of Fordhm, Villanova and the University of Pennsylvnia, which are to compete in one of the evening's features.

The "Rector's 1000,"' Abbey Club 50," 300-yard dash—District of Columbia A. A. U. Championship; schoolboy high hurdles, and One Mile Run Mason-Dixon Championship are some of the outstanding events on schedule.

A new C. U. Games record has been recorded in the enrollment of 19 high and preparatory schools and 17 colleges. Due to an overflow list school boy entries trial heats and semifinals are set for Uline Arena today between 4:30 and 5 o'clock. Each contestant is asked to bring along two safety pins—essential parts of the equipment which cannot be procured at the track.

Tickets are priced at $1.10, $1.65, $2.20 and $2.75, and are on sale at Uline Arena, in the Catholic University Athletic Office and at Spalding's.

Armstrong Faces Larkin Tonight

San Francisco, March 7 (AP).—Hammerin' Henry Armstrong, former triple boxing champion, trades punches with formidable Tippy Larkin of Garfield, N. J., in a 10-rounder here tomorrow night.

The pair will square off within the welterweight limit, probably around 140 pounds, and Armstrong, despite the loss of a decision to active Willie Joyce, Chicago Negro, last week in Los Angeles, has has been established as the favorite.

Naiman Tops Buffet For Heurich Crown

Naiman Photo captured the Heurich Amateur League championship last night at Heurich gym, defeating Eleventh Street Buffet quint, 49-42, in the final game of their playoff. Miller and Essex, with 14 and 12 points, respectively, starred for the winner, while Smerick, with 14, starred for the Buffetmen.

Head Parade of Stars . . .

Brewers Rout All-Star Five Here, 52 to 34

Heurich Brewers scored an easy 52-34 triumph over the Heurich Amateur League All-Stars yesterday at Heurich gym before 600 spectators in the weekly United Nations' Club offering.

Paced by Matt Zunic, who tallied six field goals and five free tosses for 17 points, the pros sailed to an early lead and by halftime had piled up a comfortable 24-13 advantage. Mills, with eight points, topped the All-Stars.

Bob Berry of Naiman Photo, was presented with the trophy as the most valuable player in Amateur League competition

Bears Defeat Diesels, 63-39; 36th Straight

Leading all the way, after a momentary tie at the outset, the Lichtman Bears won their thirty-sixth straight victory yesterday at Turner's Arena, defeating the famed Electric Boat Diesels before a capacity crowd, 63-39.

"Pop" Gates and "Dolly" King were in rare form, and showed the way with 17 points each. Assisted by Tarzan Cooper and Sonny Woods, they gave the Bears a 29-13 lead at the end of the first of three periods.

Bob Callahan, for the visitors, proved a mild sensation at the start, with a southpaw overhand shot that thrilled the crowd, but Charlie Isles and Puggy Bell took him in hand, and he couldn't find the basket again until the last shot of the game.

The second period closed with the Bears on the long end of a 49-31 count, after which "Mel" Glover, former Union University star, was thrown into the play, and gave a good account of himself as a beginner in the pro ranks. The Bears will meet the famous Studebaker quint in an afternoon and night game on March 21, after playing next week in the Chicago tournament.

Irish-Cardinal Grid Game Is Off

Palo Alto, Calif., March 7 (AP).—Cancellation of the Notre Dame-Stanford football game, scheduled here next September 25, was announced tonight by Al Masters, Stanford athletic director, after a telephone conversation with Head Coach Frank Leahy of the South Bend, Ind., institution.

"We don't think it would be helpful to the war effort to take up that much space on a train, transporting the players," Masters explained.

This was to have been the second game under a home-and-home arrangement made last year.

Lewis Meets Finazzo on Turner Card

Rosa to Tackle Joey Spangler In 8-Rounder Of All-Club Card

Stoney Lewis, local Negro middleweight, will attempt a short cut to a headline bout in his eight-round match tonight at Turner's Arena on an all-club show.

Stoney will be pitted against Johnny Finazzo, a fast-moving Baltimorean, whose four other brothers are crowd-pleasing scrappers.

Stoney and Finazzo will share the spotlight, more or less, with Joey Spangler, Richmond middleweight, and Manuel Rosa of Baltimore, who are slated for an eight-round session.

Lewis has bene knocking around in fours, sixes and an occasional eight for several years, and his backers believe he is long overdue for another feature shot. The last topliner Stoney had was against Frankie Wills, who won a close decision. Against Howard Bennett of Baltimore Lewis was doing all right until he threw his shoulder socket out of place, and was forced to surrender.

But Lewis came back with vengeance in his more recent bout with Nick Kirsh, and flattened Nick in one round.

Also angling for future headliners are Rosa and Spangler. Rosa would like another shot at Frankie Wills. He took the Wills bout recently on an eleventh hour notice, and all but dipped Frankie.

Indications are Lewis will be 8 to 5 to beat Finazzo, and Rosa will be a 7-5 choice over Spangler. It's Joey's first match locally in a year, although he has put up some great matches here.

Buddy Holmes, Philadelphia, will fight Speedy Wallace, Baltimore, in a six; John Garner, Washington, who beat Buddy Thomas last week, faces Gene Thomas, Washington, in a six, and Leon Kennedy, Washington, opposes Oakie Greer, Wilmington, Del., in a six.

National Loop Opens Season On April 21

New York, March 7.—The National Baseball League schedule, with such innovations as only three trips around the circuit and intersectional competition on holidays and at the finale, is released today.

The 154-game program opens on Wednesday, April 21, and closes October 3.

In contrast to previous years when every club visited each league member's diamond four times, only three trips will be made this season because of war-jammed traveling facilities.

The schedule also differs from that of the immediate past in that intersectional games mark both Decoration Day and Independence Day. The closing series also finds the Eastern teams—Boston, Brooklyn, New York and Philadelphia—at Chicago, Cincinnati, St. Louis and Pittsburgh, respectively.

The April 21 openers, however, find New York at Brooklyn, Philadelphia at Boston, St. Louis at Cincinnati and Pittsburgh at Chicago. On April 27, Boston is at New York, Brooklyn at Philadelphia, Cincinnati at Pittsburgh and Chicago at St. Louis in the "second" inaugurals.

Godoy to Meet Walker-Musto Victor in D. C.

After a weekend conference with Al Weill, his manager, Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn last night announced that Arturo Godoy, South American heavyweight boxing champion, definitely will box the winner of the scheduled 10-round main event bringing together Buddy Walker and Tony Musto at Uline Arena Friday night.

Weill has offered to match Godoy with Friday's winner in either Arturo's first or second bout in the United States.

Weill also has agreed to give Ahearn first call on the services of such fighters as Joey Archibald, Marty Servo, Al Nettlow, Lloyd Marshall and other big name boxers.

Earle Weeks, District Swim Offical, Dies

A. Earle Weeks, chairman of the District of Columbia A. A. U. swimming committee, died last night at 7:45 o'clock at Georgetown University Hospital after a three-week illness following a heart attack.

A native of Washington, he resided at 3727 T Street Northwest, and was a senior engineer in the Navy Department, in addition to his untiring activities in the interest of swimming here.

Fair Grounds Track Handles $10,014,480

By the Associated Press

New Orleans, March 7.—The Fair Grounds Race Track, winding up its 74-day regular winter meeting yesterday, almost quadrupled its handle of last year with total of $10,014,480 mutuels receipts and daily average of $135,334.50.

This compares with a total handle of $2,625,424 for last year's 44-day season and daily average of $59,600. Fair Grounds officials announed.

Beginning Tuesday a 15-day victory meeting will be held with net proceeds going to war relief agencies and local charities.

Other figures for this season, for which there were no comparative figures, were: Track commission, $996,534.56; breakage, $130,349.74; State tax, $305,349.06; return to public in betting, $8,582,246.64; total purses, $569,900; daily purse average, $7,701; purses paid in war bonds, $28,400.

Attendance figures were not available.

Bisons Whip D. C. Lions by 8-to-3 Count

By the Associated Press

Buffalo, N. Y., March 7.—The Bisons, upset, 7-3, last night by the Washington Lions, avenged that indignity tonight by routing the Capital contingent, 8-3, and assured themselves of second place in the American Hockey League race, and the not enviable task of opposing the Hershey Bears in the top playoff series.

Bill Summerhill, the local athletes' flashy right winger, took advantage of the Lions' rather porous defense to account for the hat trick—three goals—and set a new league record for goals in a single season. He now has 40, three more than Lou Trudel blazed into opposing nets for Washington last year.

The Bisons had four goals in the first period before Bob Gracie flashed the red light for the visitors. Leo Richard, Summerhill, Art Chapman and Morey Rimstad scored. Then Gracie broke away from a power play, came in alone on youthful Gordon Bell, and drilled the disc into the strings from point blank range.

The game was a clean affair, stressing speed rather than contact, and only three penalties were inflicted, all against the Lions.

Gaston Gauthier, Lion center, was kayoed in a collision in the third period, but insisted upon remaining in action once his head had stopped spinning.

Bobby Jones Raised To the Rank of Major

Atlanta, March 7 (AP).—It's Maj. Robert Tyre Jones of the Army now.

The famous Atlanta golfer, who was commissioned a captain in the Army Air Corps last June and who has been connected with the First Fighter Command in New York, has been promoted to rank of major, his father, Robert P. Jones, local resident, has been informed.

Major Jones, winner of 13 national golf championships, was ordered to active duty at Mitchel Field, N. Y., June 20.

Official Pick Overlooks G. W. Stars

Rausch, Gustafson Rated Among Tops In Title Tourney; Duke Lands Three

By Merrill W. Whittlesey
Post Staff Writer

Raleigh, N. C., March 7.—The Southern Conference basketball coaches can probably pass the buck to the tournament committee for making them pick the All-Tournament team on Friday, but somebody is to blame for a horrible job of naming the five outstanding players of the twenty-second annual championship concluded here last night.

George Washington University's new champions were awarded only one berth on the team and that amounts to a major slight. For some unknown reason, the All-Tournament team ballots are collected on Friday instead of after Saturday's finals, although the selections are not made known until Sunday.

Here is the alleged all-tournament team:

Forwards, John Konieszewski, George Washington and Tommy Peters, Davidson; center, Bob Gantt, Duke; guards, Cedric Loftis and John Seward, Duke.

G. W.'s Jim Rausch could sue the coaches for libel for leaving him off the all-star five. The blond youngster from Evansville, Ind., was one of the three outstanding players of the tournament. He stood in the side-court with 8 seconds to play and his team two points behind against Davidson and scored the tying field goal to climax a good performance and last night against Duke, Rausch was wonderful, playing perhaps the best game of his career. He was dashing around those Duke defenders so fast he made them look silly.

Gustafson Earned Honors

The Colonials' Ed Gustafson has a legitimate squawk, too. He got the ball off the backboards more in one game than Gantt did the entire tournament and against William and Mary and Duke Gussie was a potent scorer. His only game not up to standard was against Davidson and the team was picked following that game. Gantt played a good ball game against V. M. I. but he was just another center against the Citadel and he was the first player taken out against G. W. They needed his height but not that bad.

The tournament team which coaches, officials, sports writers, etc., agreed last night would be the obvious one would be: For wards, Koniszewski and Peters; center, Gustafson, and guards, Rausch and Cedric Loftis.

Nobody will dispute that Davidson's Tommy Peters was the outstanding player of the tournament and, in fact, the blond speedster was being mentioned on all-tournament teams. He's that good.

"Konnie" Rated His Berth

George Washington's John Koniszewski played his heart out for three straight nights and in our opinion was the No. 2 player of the tournament. Big John showed none of his careless anti of the football field as he hawked the ball continually, played a great game off the backboards, provided a steadying influence and scored timely points.

Cedric Loftis was Duke's outstanding player and deserves an all-tournament first team berth, shoving John Seward, Gordon Carver, the high scorer, and possibly Gantt to the second team.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Jimmy Collins, who died the other day at the age of 73, was, indeed, one of the great ball players of his time but he wasn't the first to perfect the art of playing third base, as the obituaries had it. Clark Griffith differs.

POVICH

"They could have said many nice things about Collins," says Griffith. "He played third base better than any man of his era, and there has never been a finer third baseman. But they are wrong about Collins being the first third baseman to play off the bag.

"I came into the big leagues before Collins, and the third basemen were playing away from the bag when I started in 1887. It was accepted practice by that time. The man who started that style of play wasn't a third baseman, but a first baseman. He was Charley Comiskey who played for and managed the St. Louis Browns."

Until Comiskey revolutionized the art of playing first, says Griffith, the first baseman stayed glued to the bag and many an infield hit went past him right to the outfield. "Comiskey was the first man to get away from the bag and make the pitcher come over to cover first on balls hit to the right of the base. It didn't take the other first basemen in the league long to catch on. By the next season, both the first basemen and the third basemen were playing off the bag."

Otherwise, says Griffith, Collins deserves all of the tributes paid him by the obituaries. "The two best third basemen I ever saw, defensively, until Ossie Bluege came along, were Collins and Bill Bradley of Cleveland. But Collins, with the Red Sox, was a shade the better. He was a cat on bunts.

"I'd say there have been only about five great fielding third basemen in baseball—Collins, Bradley, Bluege, Pie Traynor, and Red Rolfe. Brains didn't hurt them. Three of 'em—Collins, Bluege and Traynor, became managers, which is pretty good evidence they were smart baseball men."

Griffith was the man who brought Collins into the American League, he says. "That was the winter of 1900-01 when I was traipsing around the country helping to organize the American League and persuading good ball players to jump the National League. We wanted Collins, who was a star third baseman for the Boston Nationals, and to get him we promised to make him manager of the Boston American League club.

"Collins was the first manager the Red Sox had. The team was backed by Charley Sommers, a wealthy coal company owner of Cleveland, who was the best friend the infant American League had in a financial way. Sommers backed several of our clubs in those struggling days against the National League.

"In 1903, Collins led the Red Sox to the pennent and then won the first World Series ever played. He beat the Pittsburgh Pirates. I remember how Collins' Red Sox won that 1903 pennant. It was one of the saddest days of my life. I was managing the New York Yankees that year, and we had a half-game lead on the last day of the season. The score was tied in the ninth inning when Jack Chesbro made a wild pitch that lost the game for us."

That game was played on the old Hilltop grounds at 166th and Broadway, in the Bronx, and the Yankees of that era were called the Highlanders. Griffith recalls how the New York Giants refused to permit the American Leaguers to use the Polo Grounds. "We had to build our own diamond at the end of the car line. A few days before the season opened, we were still trying to get it ready. We found old Indian arrowheads underneath the soil and dug up also some Revolutionary War cannonballs."

Collins wasn't a third baseman originally, says Griffith. "When I first met him, he was an outfielder, and a good one. Somewhere along the trail he shifted to the infield, proving that it could be done. The fact that Collins hit only .296 as a lifetime average is no disgrace, either. Those were the days when you were batting against the spitball and the shineball and emeryball, and the pitchers had a big edge on the hitter. I was one of those lucky pitchers.

Collins wasn't the only man to make the transition from the outfield to the infield with great success, Griffith points out. "Outfielders have turned pitchers, and pitchers have become outfielders and first basemen, but the case where an outfielder becomes a great third baseman or shortstop has been rare. There was another fellow besides Collins who made it though. The first time I saw Honus Wagner, he was an outfielder with no thought of becoming the greatest shortstop who ever lived."

Double-Header Cage Games Planned Next Year in N. C.

By a Staff Correspondent

Raleigh, N. C., March 7.—Southern Conference championship sidelights:

North Carolina colleges are going in for basketball double-headers next year and George Washington's graduate manager, Johnny Busick, booked for the Colonials for several spots on the twin bills. The Southern Conference Football Coaches Association met here this morning and voted to continue with plans for the next grid season as long as football did not hinder the war effort. John Baker, head grid coach at G. W., is secretary-treasurer of the football coaches. Paul Menton, the Baltimore sports editor, officiated in the conference tournament for the eleventh consecutive year while Footsie Knight and Gummy Proctor were making their tenth appearance. In our opinion Davidson's Tommy Peters and Georgetown's Danny Kraus are the two best players we've seen this season. This Peters is great and if he was in the Big Ten or a New York school he'd be a cinch for All-America.

Duke's Coach Gerry Gerard, who succeeded Eddie Cameron, has worked this tournament as coach, official, public address announcer and radio broadcaster. Only three of the coaches whose teams qualified were carryovers from last year. George Washington's Don McNary, at 6 foot 6, is the tallest player in the tournament. Duke's Bob Gantt, who was scheduled to receive the league trophy at a Friday luncheon as the State's outstanding amateur athlete of last year, was not permitted to attend for fear it would interrupt his day's routine.

The University of North Carolina failed to qualify for the championship for the first time in its 22 years. The Tarheels have won more titles than any other school. George Lentz, George Washington trainer, was proud of the fact that George Washington was as fresh in the overtime period against Davidson as when it started the game. At the end of the first two games George Washington's John Koniszewski certainly deserved a place on the all-tournament team. Koniszewski.

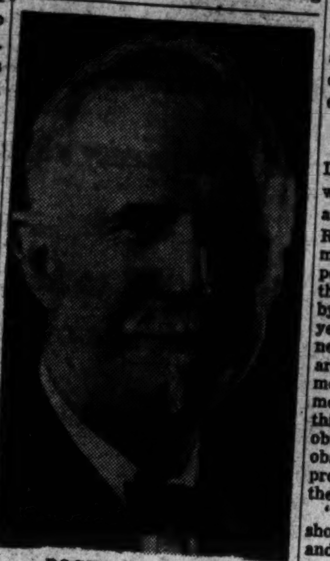
Synthetic Foods

By Roger W. Babson

Better Living Through Chemistry

I have been in Florida for a few weeks. I saw men busy cutting down and uprooting 100-year-old pine trees to plow the land to set out orange trees. These twigs they must cultivate, spray, prune and fertilize for seven years before getting a crop. New groves are being set out without any thought of what will become of them when no more fertilizers can be purchased.



ROGER W. BABSON

Those who now have old trees are patiently picking the fruit and using good gasoline to haul it to new concentrate plants which the Government has just built. Here the juice—amounting to a half glass per orange—is squeezed out and then boiled down to about one-seventh its former bulk. This is shipped to our soldiers in Africa at great risk.

In the meantime the Germans may be using the same sunshine, water, air and minerals to make, synthetically, a similar concentrate which tastes just as good and has more vitamins without bothering with planting trees! Consider also that Henry Wallace talks about giving a quart of cow's milk to every Hottentot; while Henry Ford says that synthetic milk is healthier than cow's milk! So it goes.

Yet, look through the graduate list of any agricultural college and you find that not more than 20 per cent are honest dirt farmers; while look through the graduate list of any engineering college and you'll find that 80 per cent are now following their professions. Something is wrong! When I was a boy working on a farm in Massachusetts, I had never heard of fertilizers that came in bags. The only kind that I knew came from horses, mules and cows. Yet the land adjoining that farmhouse has been planted continually for over 100 years and today is raising big crops.

My grandfather, who owned the farm, never saw the inside of an agricultural college. The farm consisted of only a few acres, plus wild pasture and woodlots. On it he raised 7 able children and died at 76 without owing a penny but leaving a good estate in Government and other bonds. Moreover, he never received any Government aid nor advice from county agents. I believe we must either go back to nature's method of farming or else use more synthetic foods.

Today, too many of our fruit growers and farmers have switched from livestock to tractors and trucks. Instead of raising their "power" in the form of hay and oats, they buy it as gasoline. Then they buy nitrates, potash and phosphorous instead of getting these in natural manure the same as God intended them to do. I am not appealing either for synthetic food or for self-perpetuating and self-contained farms; but I ask if we should not aim for one or the other.

God intended that most of us should live on the land, and all should spend some time working the land. The cycle was to raise the food for both man and beast from sunshine, water, air and the minerals of the ground. Then these minerals would return back to the land in a natural way; while all of us would do some work with out hands. (Read I Thessalonians, 4:11)

Today we are not only buying the minerals in bags, but we are shipping our foods which contain these minerals to cities. Then when the food is eaten, the refuse containing these precious minerals goes down the sewers for the fish to use in making vitamins! This destruction is in addition to the corrosion of the soil due to mechanical farming and destroying forests. This policy continued will ultimately ruin our Nation.

We shall win War II; but shall we win the peace afterward? This winning of the peace will require something more than disarming Germany and Japan or policing the world. It may require a complete revamping of our own form of Government and the elimination of farm blocs, labor blocs, employer blocs and other selfish groups. Engineers should take the Government positions now held by lawyers.

This does not mean that people are going to get their food from "pills." Not only does the stomach need bulk, but eating is a great joy to most people. Hence, no over-all radical or sudden change is to take place. We can, however, expect four developments of our food program.

(1) We will be more careful about our diet in order to increase our efficiency and decrease our doctors' bills. For most of us this will mean eating less,—and reducing our consumption of sweets, starches and proteins. (2) Farmers will enrich their soil and seeds by needed minerals as well as by fertilizers. (3) Housewives will use more concentrates and vitalize their foods with the electric waves and chemicals, such as those of the amino group. (4) The Secretary of Agriculture will be a chemist instead of a farmer.

People in cities will continue to be fed from great private and cooperative farms. These will become larger, operating both in the North and the South, moving their help and machinery back and forth as the birds fly. I now see little hope for the small farmer whose farm is his only source of income. He needs a trade or profession for cash money.

When, however, chemists operate the Department of Agriculture, I see a bright fguture for the families who are combining a small subsistence farm with some trade or profession. Each year it will be easier and cheaper for them to raise what they need to feed their families. Only as large cities get smaller and more of these little cooperative sustenance farms increase in number will America be better, safer and happier.

Our standard of living will be raised by the scientists in laboratories rather than by the politicians in Congress. What has been accomplished in connection with hybrid corn can be repeated and extended with sugar beets, soybeans, potatoes and tomatoes. The combining of careful breeding and scientific soil mineralization has boundless possibilities. Added to the above are the possibilities of the changing of products from one kind to another by rearrangement of the atoms. The field of fermentation also offers huge opportunities. It is very possible that—within a few years—a family may, with little effort, raise its own food and far better food than can now be bought.

War Rations, Lenten Fast Are Compared

A comparison between war rationing and Lenten self-denial was made yesterday by the Rev. John J. Reilly, director of the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception, Catholic University, in one of many sermons heralding the approach of Lent. It begins the day after tomorrow—Ash Wednesday.

Father Reilly said, in part:

"It strikes us as coincidental that Lent this year comes at a time when the full effects of rationing are making themselves apparent. Rationing is nothing more than mortification—mortification imposed upon us—mortification for the most part taken in good grace by most Americans. For 2000 years the church has stressed the need of self-denial. Very few words art wasted about its necessity now, most of the talk centers around the methods to be employed. Perhaps this year the church will see Lent observed as Lent has never been observed before, for war is a grim professor and makes men do what the church has never fully done.

"This rationing imposed upon us should be good, both for your body and for your soul. It should do your heart good, too, for deep down in our heart of hearts we know that this is all a part of the supreme effort to preserve our country and what our country stands for. Accept it then in the spirit of love for the land that has been good to all of us, and let it overlap into your self-denial for the love of Christ who has been good to us besides.

"A rationed home this Lent may spell a quick victory and peace to enjoy America. A mortified home will mean a greater victory and peace in your Eternal Home. Surely what you are doing for your homeland you should do for the land that will hold you for all eternity. If anything stimulates your patriotism do not let it stop there. Let it stimulate your love for God; for God gave us all America, and God prepared a questionnaire to be answered by those who sought to signify their love 'if any man will come after Me, let him deny himself and take up his cross and follow me.'"

Chaplain Voices Appeal

An appeal for more spiritual-centered education was voiced yesterday by Lieut. C. Leslie Glenn, United States Navy chaplain and now on leave as rector of historical St. John's Episcopal "Church of the Presidents," Lafayette Square.

Initiating a series of four Lenten sermons at St. John's on the general theme of "Christian Victory," Chaplain Glenn contended that "education means little unless it is inspired by something for some service."

Chaplain Glenn said that education for the common man is the chief thing our great national wealth has brought us, adding:

"In that, America is the leading nation of the world. This leadership cannot be vacated because it is essentially a spiritual gift. It cannot be given away to others. It must be used for others. It cannot be hidden in a napkin, or under self-deprecatory remarks.

"The Master is still austere, reaping where he has not sown and taking up where He has not stored. The church must take this shining talent of the American colleges and see that it makes gain for the world." Chaplain Glenn's topic yesterday was "The Victory of Understanding."

'Idea' Offensive Asked

The Right Rev. Msgr. Fulton J. Sheen, of Catholic University's faculty, yesterday called for "the offensive of a great idea" to defeat what he termed the "false absolutes" of totalitarian philosphies.

"Trying to preserve freedom and democracy without God, in whom alone they are grounded, is like preserving the false teeth of a drowning man," Monsignor Sheen said. "If we save the man, we will save his teeth; and if we save our souls in God, we will save our democracy and our freedom—but not otherwise."

Monsignor Sheen, distinguished Catholic orator and theologian, spoke on the Catholic Hour over WRC on the subject of "How Overcome the Evil"—tenth in a series on the general theme of "The Crisis in Christendom."

Ringside Table

With Mary Harris

HOUDINI'S LAST WORDS. All newspaper readers remember that the great Houdini left a sealed message as a challenge to spiritualists who might claim to have contacted him in the world beyond. No spiritualist has ever been able to come forward with the contents of the sealed message. But Norman, psychoanalyst of Treasure Island and an old friend of Houdini's, says that when he recently visited the great magician's widow, he said: "Now, didn't Houdini really put a sheet of blank paper in that envelope?" The late Mrs. Houdini flushed and her eyes twinkled but she only said, "Why, you divvle!" . . . There are several disputed versions but keen minded Norman claims no supernatural powers, says his guess was simply based on a first-hand knowledge of how the Houdini mind worked.

There may be a band and dancing in the Lafayette Hotel very soon. Manager Harry Nash hasn't decided yet whether it would be better to locate the new activities in the hotel's cocktail lounge or its very elegant Lafayette Room.

LIFTING OF THE GAS BAN will surely bring about the reopening of a number of suburban spots. While Crossroads kept open, gas or no gas, its big parking lot will be crowded again. Milt Barrett, owner of La Conga, has reopened his bar, expects soon to have his bistro in full swing. River Bend and the Nigthingale are also likely to reopen, we hear. Relaxing of the gas regulations will also be appreciated by patrons of Glen Echo amusement park, due to open on April 10.

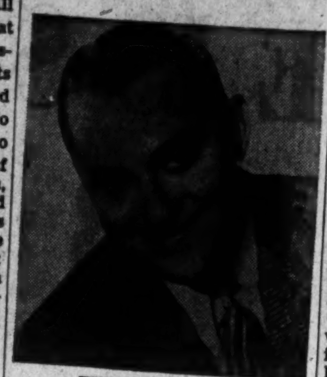
NIGHT CLUB QUIZ KIDS. Frank Romer, publicity bassoon beater for the Neptune Room, and Maestro Dave Roberts will give a "quiz luncheon" for the town's night club editors on Friday. The idea is that first they feed us and then torture us. Publicist Romer writes ominously, "Better give your noodle the needle because Dave has planned some big-scale stumpers."

A great day will be March 21. Leo, the seer of Mayfair, says Hitler will meet some unspecified doom on that date. Let's hope it's an appointment in Samarra.

"AS TIME GOES BY," theme tune of "Casablanca," is coming up with a rush comparable to nothing but "White Christmas." It's an oldie, too. Maestro Rocco Terrone of Mayfair tells us it was published in 1931 and Treasure Island's Paul Kain remembers that Rudy Vallee gave it quite a whirl. Durward Bowersox of Burt's Trans-Lux is making a beautiful violin solo of it. Kathleen Quinn of El Patio thinks it's the loveliest song she's heard in months. And while we haven't heard them do it, we're sure that "As Time Goes By" will also be at its best when done by Ray Donahue of the Lounge Riviera, Marty Rubin of the Pall Mall Room, Eve Knight of the King Cole Room, little Polly Parker of the Anchor Room and the Heintze Brothers and June Marlow of Restaurant "823." It's their kind of number.

Milton Davis is currently wracking his brain over the problem of new summer uniforms for his Rainbow Room band. The idea is to get something snappy, but using a patriotic minimum of material. We suggested shorts—Maestro Davis was amused but not interested.

LOVELY CREATURES. Nothing less than entrancing is Loretta, now dancing at the Lotus. She is a tiny brunette with a blue-black up hair-do, wears a gown that should be called "Sunset"—a swirl of pale rose and azure chiffon sprinkled with silver spangles . . . Singer Mary La Marr of the Cosmos Room is chic as a Vogue cover in a slim black frock with aquamarine bands that accent her blue eyes . . . Balalaika's Dena Larena looks like Marian Davies in her Circassian costume of white chiffon with the saucy pillbox hat . . . Helen Norman, svelte new singer of the Mayflower Lounge, wears unusual gold coin earrings engraved with her initials . . . Earline King of the Dubonnet Room is all done up these evenings in a valentine-ish gown of ruched blue satin.



TEDDY POWELL, whose orchestra opens at the Victory Room tonight

SERVICE MAKES 'EM HUSKY. Denny Calvert, former assistant manager of Hi Hat, was visiting there lately. He's gained 26 pounds since he got into uniform . . . Bob Pace, after acting as volunteer singer at Casino Royal, told us that since becoming a Marine he weighs 20 pounds more than when he was soloing at the King Cole Room.

Impresarios have been doing some fancy angling for Carroll Masters' splendid band, now the star attraction at Del Rio. After concluding its Washington engagement, it looks as though the unit will go either to the Edison Hotel in New York or to Boston.

GLOAMING ROAMING. Lenny Kent squelched a heckler at Paul Young's the other eve by saying witheringly, "Look, folks—a gremlin!" . . . Maestro Johnny Velasquez of the Copocabana, who ought to know, vows that the conga is strictly a North American invention . . . Owner Julius Richards of the Old New Orleans smokes the most picturesque pipe you'll ever see—a giant calabash . . . Owner Jules James of Restaurant "400" is planning something "radically different" in entertainment. Tell you more about it later.

Rockhill Tibetan Collection Given to Library

The Rockhill collection of lore from the mystic land of Tibet has been added to the already notable store of Tibetan material in the Library of Congress by a gift from Mrs. William W. Rockhill, wife of the late minister to China, Archibald MacLeish, librarian, announced yesterday.

Included are rare protraits of the Dalai Lama and the Tashi Lama, the spiritual heads of that mountainous land of Tibet. One of them is a painting which was presented by the Tale Lama Wu-tai shan to Rockhill in 1908.

Rare Tibetan works on the little known early religion of that country, the Bon religion, are included as well as some Tibetan translations of Buddhist writings.

"The bustling capital of the warring United Nations is now the best place to study the secrets of remote and mysterious Tibet, concerned with the peace and mystic ritual of wearing a yellow hat," MacLeish said.

Print Exhibition Will Open May 1

The first competitive National Exhibition of Prints by the Library of Congress will be held here from May 1 to July 1, it was announced yesterday by Archibald MacLeish, librarian.

It will be held in the galleries of the Library and will be open to all print makers for work issued since March 1, 1942.

Prints honored by prizes will be purchased for the Library from funds donated by the late Joseph Pennell, well known illustrator.

3 Churches Unveil Service Emblems Here

Three prominent local congregations yesterday unveiled service emblems for their men on the world's fighting fronts—some of whom have already laid down their lives.

The congregations were Kendall Baptist, Ninth near Independence Avenue Southwest; Foundry Methodist, Sixteenth and P Streets Northwest; Columbia Heights Christian, 1435 Park Road Northwest. Albright Memorial Evangelical Church, Fourth and Rittenhouse Streets Northwest, added 10 stars to its flag.

The ceremony at Kendall Church, led by the Rev. Len Stevens, also included dedication of American and Christian flags, made by Miss Ada Weidger. There were 28 stars, including a gold one that memorialized Clifford Lewis, United States Navy, killed in the Pacific theater three days after Pearl Harbor was attacked. The Christian flag was a gift of the Baptist Young People's Union of the church; the American flag, given by Mrs. L. J. Moncrief, in memory of her husband, a veteran of the Spanish-American War, and the service flag was presented by the congregation.

The emblem presented at Foundry Methodist Church honored 100 men, and was gift of Mrs. T. J. Grattis in memory of her husband. Dr. Frederick Brown Harris, pastor and Senate chaplain, conducted the services. Bishop Adna Wright Leonard, Washington Methodist resident prelate, spoke last night.

The flag unveiled at Columbia Heights Church was a tribute to its 38 men in the armed forces. The Rev. Harry L. Bell, pastor, was in charge of the dedicatory ceremony.

Vardi Gallery Soloist

Emanuel Vardi, first violist of the Navy Band Orchestra, will be the soloist on tonight's concert at the National Gallery of Art at 8 o'clock.

First Baptist, Cleveland Park Churches Hold Anniversaries

Two well-known churches yesterday climaxed their anniversary celebrations at special services.

They were First Baptist Church, Sixteenth and O Streets Northwest, local "mother" church of its denomination, which marked its 141st birthday, and Cleveland Park Congregational Church, 3400 Lowell Street Northwest, which observed its silver jubilee.

Among the highlights of the First Baptist fete was the appearance as guest speaker of Dr. Jesse M. Bader, director of the evangelism department, Federal Council of Churches, New York City. Later in the day the church played host to a city-wide lay workers' conference launching the "Our Capital for Christ" Lenten evangelistic project of the Washington Federation of Churches.

Cleveland Park Church worshipers, led by the Rev. Paul W. Yinger, heard as guest speaker in the morning, Dr. Ferdinand Q. Blanchard of Cleveland, moderator of the General Council of Congregational Christian Churches in America. The principal speaker at an interdenominational service last night was the Rev. Charles W. F. Smith, a canon of the Washington Cathedral.

Church Press Session

"Lenten Church Publicity" will be discussed at a meeting of the Washington Church Press Association today at 7:45 p. m. in The Washington Post conference room, fifth floor. Mrs. Marvin Wurts, association chief scribe, will preside.

Jobs Measure Due For Test in Senate

Clash Expected Next Week on McKellar Bill

The amended McKellar job confirmation bill will be presented to the Senate this week with a report from the Senate Judiciary Committee, it was disclosed yesterday.

The clash the measure is certain to precipitate on the floor, however, probably will be delayed until the following week to allow time for opponents of the bill to file a minority report if they desire.

Senator Hatch (Democrat) of New Mexico has indicated that he plans tentatively to submit such a dissenting report, and will decide after he has read the majority opinion. The measure was approved by a 9 to 5 committee vote.

Hatch, with Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat) of Wyoming, led the fight against the bill in committee.

O'Mahoney was the author of the revision of the measure which the committee adopted, narrowing its scope and throwing safeguards around the classified Civil Service. As first written, the bill would have required Senate confirmation of all appointees to Federal jobs paying more than $4500 a year. O'Mahoney's substitute, however, removed the salary standard, and listed specific classes of policy-making officials to which the act would apply. It also excepted regular Civil Service employes.

O'Mahoney turned against the measure again when the committee voted at the last minute to adopt an amendment offered by Senator Danaher (Republican) of Connecticut restoring the original $4500 a year provision.

O'Mahoney's opposition to this restoration, coupled with support of his own original substitute, is likely to make the fight on the floor a three-cornered one—among those who favor the committee's version of the bill, those who oppose the legislation altogether, and those who will try only to strike out the Danaher amendment.

Much apparently will depend on the stand which Senator McKellar (Democrat) of Tennessee, who wrote the original bill, takes on the rewritten measure. McKellar has been ill and away from his office since the committee revised his bill. Another amendment agreed to in committee which may alter his position is the insertion of a provision exempting employes of the Tennessee Valley Authority from the act.

Meanwhile, committee clerks were preparing the majority report and estimated that it would probably be submitted to the Senate on Thursday.

Charles L. Hinkle Dies From Poison, Police Report

Charles Lee Hinkle, 38, 2420 Sixteenth Street Northwest, died last night, apparently from poison, according to police.

Hinkle and Mrs. Hinkle, police said, were visiting Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Smith, 48:5 Reservoir Road Northwest, when he was said to have taken the lethal dose. He was found in the bathroom of the Smith home by his wife, police reported.

Rescue Squad No. 1 and an Emergency Hospital ambulance were summoned to the scene and futilely rendered first aid.

gime's slowness in repealing Vichy decrees which placed restrictions on Jews at German insistence.

Giraud's statement in effect wiped out the Vichy touch over North Africa and is expected to be followed within a few days by a formal list of decrees repealing the Vichy laws one by one.

Because of the delicate Jewish-Arab situation, caution had been urged in many quarters regarding the wholesale repeal of the laws.

Such laws as those forbidding French citizens to listen to foreign radios still are on the books, but have not been enforced since the Allied landings in North Africa.

Old Officials Restored

One step taken recently in Morocco to restore the status quo of the pre-armistice days was a decree restoring office to officials dismissed under German pressure in 1940.

Finally, a clearing of all Vichy laws from North Africa probably will coincide with the return of Gen. Georges Catroux, liaison officer between Generals Giraud and De Gaulle, with a mission of 20 representatives of De Gaulle. General Catroux is expected to arrive in about a week, and then start immediate negotiations to pave the way for De Gaulle himself to come and meet General Giraud.

In another formal statement in the name of Giraud tonight the commander in chief protested against a German radio announcement that the Nazi regime had been installed formally in Alsace and Lorraine. In a somewhat lengthy statement a spokesman for Giraud bitterly criticized the Vichy government for allowing Alsace and Lorraine to be incorporated into the Nazi Reich.

Bureau Head Removed

Giraud has gradually been relaxing restrictions on Jews, and has assured them relief from oppression.

On February 6, he promised relief for oppressed Jews in French Africa and the war committee he established announced it would continue his policies. Discriminations against Jews were relaxed, and some political prisoners were released.

The committee announced it would sponsor some civil reforms, including restitution of Jewish property and re-entrance of Jewish children in public primary and secondary schools, and remove restrictions on Jewish doctors, dentists, and lawyers, and would examine cases of political internees to permit them to join in the war effort.

Louisville Mayor Gets Overseas Assignment

Louisville, Ky., March 7 (INS).—Mayor Wilson W. Wyatt of Louisville was en route to Washington tonight where, his friends said, he will be given an important assignment "overseas."

It was reported the assignment will come from the Board of Economic Warfare, and will last two months. During his absence the president of the board of aldermen will act as mayor.

HEINZ 57 VARIETIES

THERE IS STILL A RUBBER CRISIS IN 1943

It is true that you no longer need a ration certificate for recaps.

It is true that the Government has cut through all red tape to make it easier for every citizen to keep his war car rolling for essential driving purposes.

If you wear your tires down too thin so that they cannot be recapped . . . if you fail to keep your tires properly inflated and in good repair . . . the whole rubber situation could change overnight.

You would need new tires and the entire objective of the Government's campaign would be missed.

There can be no let-down for the military needs.

There is not a man, woman or child in America that wants to take an ounce of rubber needed for a son or a brother at the front.

To go from the present recapping program to the building of new tires would mean that our armed forces would have to do without the equipment they need.

It is the intent of our Government to put more and better planes into the air; more and better tanks on the ground; more and better ships on the seas than anything that the Axis can produce.

This is not only to win the war, but to shorten the war—and to save the lives of American boys.

You make this possible by doing your share . . . by not allowing your tires to wear down too thin . . . by driving under 35 miles per hour . . . by keeping your tires inflated properly . . . by seeing that the necessary repairs are made when they should be.

The Baruch report stated that we were going to hit the bottom of the rubber stockpile in 1943.

The Government has worked out a program to keep our cars rolling for essential driving.

Let's do our part.

RECAPPING 1. The inspection of the tire, inside and out, determines whether it is fit for recapping. All cuts and breaks are then carefully repaired. This inspection and repair avoids the waste of recapping material on a tire that might fail.

2. The buffing of the old tread smooths out the uneven spots and roughens up the rubber. This makes a good, even surface, ready for the application of the special rubber cement that will bond the new tread to the old.

3. The new tread, called "camelback," is carefully applied to the sticky surface of the tire and rolled down under pressure to squeeze out any air bubbles that could cause trouble later on. This "camelback" is made from reclaimed rubber processed from the scrap rubber.

4. The "cure" bonds the new tread to the old. Great skill is needed in maintaining the rigid factory controls necessary. Such quality recapping, using wartime materials, will give good service if air pressures are kept up to 32 lbs. and speeds kept down below 35 m.p.h.

REPAIRING 1. The inspection of a tire outside often reveals cuts, bruises and other signs of hidden trouble inside. The tire is then removed for an inspection of the damage inside. Nearly every damage can be repaired—even holes clear through the tire.

2. The preparation of the damaged part of the tire requires great skill. The broken cords are cut away and smoothed up in much the same manner as a dentist cleans a tooth . . Next, rubber cement is applied, ready for the special patching material.

3. The build-up of the inside patch likewise requires great skill. Here, the broken cords are replaced, cord for cord, ply for ply, in a criss-cross patchwork. Any holes or cuts outside are plugged with special wear-resisting tread material.

4. The "cure," or vulcanizing, of the repair, bonds it to the rest of the tire under scientific factory controls. Properly done, such a repair will last for thousands of miles . . . Moral: Don't scrap a damaged tire till a tire expert has examined it.

Things you can do to save every ounce of rubber left in your tires

1. Never drive unless it is absolutely necessary.
2. Never drive alone . . . Share your car.
3. Have your tires recapped in time to save them.
4. Have your tires inflated every week or two.
5. Baby your tires . . . Start and stop slowly; slow down on curves.
6. Avoid curbs, ruts, especially pavement-breaks, now more serious because of wartime necessity.

Quickly 'Cured'

It was during a recent air raid test here. The "ambulance" had rushed to the scene of disaster, picked up the "victim" and started to the hospital. Midway there it stopped. It was out of gas and it developed there was no ration card. A tow car was called. The "victim" recovered.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

More Night Work Under Discussion

A further staggering of working hours and the shift of additional employes to night work is again under discussion . . . OPA Administrator Prentiss Brown is reported to have scaled down his proposed 1944 budget. He has no intention of building up a huge staff, and he'll depend more and more on voluntary help . . . It's estimated, informally, that the retrenchment program described here will force less essential agencies to part with up to 50,000 of their employes . . . The inside word now is that Selective Service will abolish its 3-B classification in early summer. Many Federal workers who are in essential jobs and who have dependents have sought a draft reclassification from 3-A to 3-B. Local draft boards, however, have reclassified the employes to 1-A. Employes, obviously, don't know what to do, especially when the Government fails to lay down a definite policy.

New WAVES in the expanded Naval Communications Office here, it seems, have been making plenty of mistakes. In desperation, the lieutenant commander in charge posted this notice on the bulletin board:

"There are too many bad busts here."

The admiral came in the day following and while he was looking at the notice a little WAVE passed by and commented:

"And there isn't anything we can do about it, admiral."

SENATE CIVIL SERVICE COMMITTEE: The amendment to the new Federal employe pay bill which would pay overtime for only "time actually worked" would result in an almost impossible bookkeeping problem in all Federal agencies that would take the time of hundreds of additional employes. Pay checks would be delayed, mistakes made, and the cost of such a program would be far greater than the present system. Under the amendment if an employe took off two hours during a work period he'd be docked for two hours pay despite the fact that the employe had annual leave coming to him. The entire pay system in Government would be thrown out of gear if the amendment stays in. Under the present working arrangement, overtime is added to the annual rate and the employes are paid overtime when they take annual or sick leave.

"GOVERNMENT GIRL"

The Council of Personnel Administration has voted unanimously to join with this column to sponsor a drive to raise funds among Federal workers to buy war planes for both Army and the Navy. The campaign originally was suggested by a Federal worker who suggested the planes be named "Government Girl." Contributions will be limited to $1 each but no one has any authority to start collecting now. You'll hear about that when the time comes. It now appears to be a certainty that the drive will be conducted, but there are several hurdles yet to be cleared and you'll be kept informed on the progress through this column. In any event the campaign won't get underway until after March 15 income taxes and the current Red Cross drive.

Meantime, this column wishes to acknowledge and thank the hundreds of employes who have pledged themselves to help in the campaign. They'll be called on. If you're one of those who sent a dollar to me this is to inform you that the money will be sent to the Treasury Department at the proper time. The department will be the custodian of the fund. . . . Federal agencies will have until Wednesday, March 10, to make nominations for the February Better Government Contest sponsored by The Post. The winner, who will be awarded a $100 war bond, will be announced Sunday.

Civil Service has relaxed its strict ban against Federal agencies accepting applications from job-hunters. The agencies can now take applications from employes in the service, and former employes. The applications must be sent to the commission along with Form 46, requesting transfer or reinstatement . . . Army's Quartermaster Corps has set up a better utilization of personnel project to get more effective use of its manpower. Employes have been assured that none will be affected through the merging, elimination or reorganization of offices that are expected to result.

An interdepartmental committee on wartime recreation may be set up to provide healthful and morale-building leisure time activities. The committee also would go into methods of cutting down the enormous turnover and absenteeism . . . Government girls will be shown that new hair-do and how to look chic on a Federal salary at a career clinic to be held tonight, Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday in the auditorium of the South Interior Building. Sponsors are the employe counselor's office of Navy's Bureau of Ordnance and the staff of Mademoiselle Magazine. Cash door prizes will be awarded each evening.

Milk Supply Here Called In Danger

Sasscer Fears Sale of Dairy Herds Will Lead To Shortage

Concern over threatened depletion of Washington's milk supply because of the sale by dairymen of milk cows for beef, was expressed last night by Representative Lansdale G. Sasscer (Democrat) of Maryland of Prince Georges County.

"While I am anxious to see that the farmers are able to make comfortable livings," he said, "I am primarily interested in seeing the continuation of an adequate supply of milk flowing into the Capital, where it is such a vital factor in the feeding of children. This is particularly true now with rationing cutting into the supplies of other foods."

Sasscer said he was alarmed by reports he had heard of the sale of large dairy herds in the Washington milk shed, particularly in Howard and Baltimore counties.

E. Brooke Lee, cattle-farmer and political leader in Montgomery County, also said last night he had noted advertisements in Frederick, Howard and Baltimore County newspapers offering large dairy herds for sale. Lee corroborated previous reports that many Montgomery County dairymen were liquidating their herds.

Farmers complain they are caught between the pressure of steadily rising feed and labor costs and the ceiling placed on milk prices by the Department of Agriculture. Currently they are asking for a boost of 2 cents a quart in Washington.

"It is obvious that if the current trend of sacrificing milch cows in the Washington milk shed for beef is continued, Washington faces a serious situation," Sasscer said.

"I am convinced, from the brief study I have given the matter, that an equitable solution, fair to the farmer and to the consumer, can be worked out that will guarantee the capital its much needed milk.

"If it should develop that congressional action is required to save Washington's milk supply from serious reduction, then I certainly am in favor of such action."

Lee said he had been advised that "20 or more herds had been sold in Baltimore County, half a dozen in Howard, a dozen in Montgomery and a number in Frederick County, most of them for beef.

City News In Brief

Poll Tax Conference

A two-day conference of the National Committee to Abolish the Poll Tax will open tomorrow at 1:30 p. m. at the National Press Club Auditorium. The afternoon session will be addressed by A. F. Whitney, president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, Nathan Cowan, C. I. O., and representatives of several other organizations. Indian Fighter Dorsey Looks At Wars, Past and Present, at 94

One of 2 Surviving G. A. R. Men Here Was G.P.O. Proofreader

WILLIAM F. DORSEY

A wag once made the wish that William F. Dorsey, old Indian fighter of 3222 Twentieth Street Northeast, would "live to eat the hen that scratches over your grave."

Dorsey got from bed at noon yesterday, as is his wont, ate a bulging breakfast, smoked a cigar, first of his daily six, and prepared for his ninety-fourth birthday anniversary eve and some heavy reflections on the war.

The war is pretty exciting, too. They're fighting it, in his mind, at such places as "Dead Women's Gulch," around badlands with Indian names, at Alkali Station on the Platte River where a redskin, crawling toward an Army post, meaning mayhem and educating the Army in tactics commandos use today, received a well-aimed bullet from Private Dorsey of Company G, First Colorado Cavalry.

Yesterday Dorsey, heavy with G. A. R. honors, outliving the hen that scratched his grave, outliving the local G. A. R. group except for one man, John M. Kline, 95, of 4801 Seventh Street Northwest, sat at his birthday party table which groaned with food. That part doesn't matter because a man should smoke cigars and never eat all he can hold if aiming at 94, he thinks.

He was born in Rising Sun, Ind., on March 8, 1849; went out to Nebraska with his parents in 1857; drove a prairie schooner filled with flour and bacon in a line of 74 crawling wagons to Colorado in three severe winter months of 1864-65, and, with Buffalo Bill and Kit Carson liking him, joined the cavalry. When the Indians grunted Uncle, Dorsey settled down to work as a printer on the Nebraska City News; roamed, as printers did and maybe still do, from paper to paper, and came here in 1889 as a proofreader for the Government Printing Office. Retiring in 1920, he thinks he is the oldest living printer.

Naturally now, at his age, his old war is a beating drum, the present war a set of headlines which seldom, if ever, carry a typographical error for a proofreader like himself to spot and worry about.

Ezio Pinza Uses Vibrant Voice For Large, Cordial Audience

Dorothy Hodgson Dorsey presents Ezio Pinza in a song recital audience assembled in Constitution Hall. Accompanist: Gibner King. Program of songs of Mozart, Handel, Sarti, Legrenzi, Beethoven, Torelli, Scarlatti, Verdi, Cimara, Respigni, Walter Kramer, Claude Warford, Richard Hageman and Thomas Dunhill.

An exchange of one Metropolitan Opera singer for another did not diminish the size of the large audience assembled in Constitution Hall yesterday afternoon, when Ezio Pinza filled an engagement originally arranged for his colleague, John Charles Thomas, who is busy these Sundays as master of ceremonies for a radio program in California. Admirers of the American baritone could and did maintain the same attitude toward the Italian basso, and the recital was received with marked cordiality. Apparently the only drop of disappointment in the cup of enjoyment was reserved for those who wished for a less conservative and familiar program.

BROWN

Indubitably one of the best bassos of his generation, Mr. Pinza was in vibrant voice and in full command of his dramatic power in the projection of song. Artistry was evident in his readings, which were sensitively phrased and emotionally colored. His histrionic ability made vivid his interpretation of each selection, and kept the close attention of his listeners. His opening group was four stock items: an aria from Mozart's "Die Zauberfloete," Handel's "Alma Mia," Sarti's "Lungi dal caro bene" and Legrenzi's "Che fiero cotume."

His second group started with Beethoven's "In questa tomba oscura." It would be interesting to hear sometime a few, if not all, of the settings which resulted from a drawingroom pleasantry. At a social evening in Vienna, Countess Rzevuska improvised an aria at the piano and Giuseppe Carpani, court poet, extemporized some lugubrious verses to go with it. Before the joke had ended, settings had been written by Paer, Salieri, Weigl, Zingarelli, Cherubini, Asioli and other composers. Beethoven composed the sixty-third and last setting for the last collection which was published in 1808. Curiously enough, Beethoven's version, the only one to be heard these days, was not at that time considered the best of the lot.

With the Beethoven aria were associated Torelli's "ru lo sai" and Scarlatti's "Chi vuole innamorarsi." A group in English contained three American songs—Walter Kramer's "Minnelied," Claude Warford's "Earth is Enough" and Richard Hageman's "Miranda"—and a setting of Yeats' "The Cloths of Heaven" by the British composer, Thomas Dunhill. In the final group were Pietro Cimara's "Fiocca la neve," Ottorino Respighi's "Nebbie" and the aria, "Il lacerato spirito" from Verdi's "Simon Boccanagra."

Washington Cathedral presents the U. S. Army Music School Choir and William Strickland on Sunday afternoon. Program of choral and organ music by Gabrieli, Palestrina, Sweelinck, Friedell, Chesnokov, Bortnyanski and Sowerby.

Many of the worshipers at evensong service in Washington Cathedral yesterday afternoon remained to hear a concert by the well-trained Army Music School Choir under the direction of William Strickland. It was an hour of religious music which was rewarding in its message of devotion and in the manner of performance. The first group of choral works was drawn from predecessors of Bach and Giovanni Pierluigi da Palestrina, King Jao IV of Portugal and Jan Pieterzoon Sweelinck.

Closer to our own time were Pavel Chesnokov's "Cherubic Hymn" and Dmitri Borthyanski's "Lo, a Gentle Voice to Heaven Sounding," and exactly contemporary was Leo Sowerby's "De Profundis," a setting of Psalm 130, written for the Army Music School Choir and sung for the first time. This new work by the versatile American composer is distinguished in style and contained a remarkably impressive section for voices a capella.

Also heard here for the first time was Harold Friedell's organ symphony in E minor, played by Mr. Strickland from manuscript. Written in heavily registered style with a plenitude of modern harmony, the work requires more than one hearing for assimilation by the listener. In fact, one may question the viability of dissonant counterpoint on the organ. The most enjoyable of the three movements was the cantabile of lighter construction and more lyrical content.

National Gallery of Art presents Emanuel Vardi and Earl Wild in a recital of music for viola and piano on Sunday evening. Program of compositions by Marcello, Brahms, Hindemith, Frescobaldi, Paganini, Chopin and Novacek.

Two estimable young musicians from the United States Navy Band Orchestra, Emanuel Vardi and Earl Wild, were heard last evening in the east garden court of the National Gallery of Art by an audience that occupied every seat and coign of vantage. Mr. Vardi, who draws a rich tone from the viola, and Mr. Wild, who is both dexterous and expressive with the piano, offered as the principal works the F minor sonata of Brahms and the early viola sonata by Paul Hindemith. Their readings were admirable in execution and poetic in feeling. Compared with his later works, Hindemith's Opus II sounded almost as romatic and perfervid as the sonata of young Richard Strauss.

Mr. Vardi demonstrated his technical skill by playing two of Paganini's violin caprices. On the program were also arrangements by him of a short sonata by Marcello and Chopin's C sharp minor nocturne. Other items were a toccata by Frescobaldi transcribed by Cassado, Balsam's transcription of Brahm's B minor intermezzo, and Novacek's "Perpetual Motion."

D. C. Grocers Hit Price Differential

Higher Ceilings In N. Y., Philadelphia Deprive Capital, Merchants Say

With increased sales of fresh vegetables and fruits among the major effects of canned food restrictions at the end of the first week of point rationing, Washington grocers complained yesterday that higher ceiling prices for such produce in New York and Philadelphia were depriving the Capital of adequate supplies.

Max Shapiro, District produce merchant, pointed out that prices in the larger cities were considerably higher than ceilings here, and said this was especially true in the case of cabbage and beans from Florida and peas from Mexico.

Sent Farther North

As a result, he said, many shipments which might have come to Washington have been sent farther North. District grocers blamed this condition for small stocks, which, some asserted, had made point-rationing work a hardship in some localities.

Meanwhile, the grocers said, housewives generally were following OPA advice to use the higher point stamps first. Only a few shoppers appear, however, to have become completely familiar with all the possibilities of point-rationing, and a great many simply turn their ration books over to the grocery store cashiers who take out the stamps for their purchases. Grocers also reported increased sales of the four-ounce cans of baby foods, which require only one-point stamps.

Vegetables Lead

Most housewives are buying canned vegetables rather than canned fruits with their ration stamps, the grocers said, and the use of stamps has not been so free as it is expected it would be in coming weeks, probably as a result of stocking up before rationing began. Grocers also believed that, as housewives became more familiar with the use of the stamps, buying would more nearly approach "war-normal."

They also pointed out that stamps are being used less frequently in higher-income neighborhoods than in the lower-income sections of the city, probably because those with more money to spend had larger supplies on hand when rationing began. Besides, they said, those who could afford to do so were purchasing more expensive unrationed foods, while, in the poorer sections canned goods have always been more widely used.

WAACS Attend School

Eighteen WAAC officers are taking the third advanced specialized training course at the Adjutant General's School here, it was announced yesterday, along with 400 Army officers.

Parents Here Learn Son Died Fighting German Plane at Sea

FOLEY

The parents of Hubert Madden Foley yesterday were notified that their son "had died in the service of his country."

They had been fortified for the news from the Navy Department, however, and had been awaiting the message for weeks.

Late last year they had expected Hubert home on furlough but instead a letter came from the naval officer who was in charge of the gun crew in which their son served.

It read:

"I was commanding officer of the naval armed guard unit aboard a merchant ship in which your son Hubert was serving his country when, while manning a machine gun during, an attack upon the convoy by Nazi planes, on the 14th of September, 1942, he received the wounds which caused his death some three hours later. (Deleted). The plane was shot down.

To Hospital Ship

"I at once administered drugs to ease his pain, applied first aid and prior to his transfer to a ship with hospital facilities I repeated over him, not with the authority of a priest but with no less fervence of feeling to his God and mine, 'Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven.'

"The following morning I received word from the hospital ship that he had reported to the Great Commanding Officer.

"Foley was one of the best liked men on the ship. He was the most promising and without doubt the most cheerful and willing man in my command. Though it is not right for me to say, nevertheless. I truly wish it were any of us rather than he. He was just more than a member of the unit. To me he was a cheerful and loyal friend. As we are entering the harbor here in the States, the national ensign of the United States of America is at half mast out of respect to and in remembrance of Hubert Madden Foley, signalman, second class. U. S. N.

"In deepest sympathy, I am, sincerely,

"GEORGE B. LENNIG,
"Lieutenant (J. G.) U. S. N. R."

Lived in Washington

The letter was a great comfort to the parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Mark Foley, now living at 3916 Nicholson Street, Hyattsville, Md., but formerly long-time residents of the Petworth neighborhood.

The delay in official confirmation was occasioned by the fact that Hubert was transferred to a British naval ship and the Navy Department had to obtain official confirmation of the death through the British admiralty.

Foley, 22, better known as "Duke," was born in St. Peter's Parish in Southeast Washington, but his family moved to Petworth when he was a child. He was graduated from St. Gabriel's School, and is the first graduate to be killed in action. He also attended Central High School and was an employe of Pepco when he enlisted in the Navy September 2, 1941, and attended Signal School in Chicago. He expected to win his rating as signalman, first class, when he returned from the voyage on which he was killed.

Lieutenant Lennig told a brother, Francis James Foley, who is serving in naval aviation, that Hubert was supposed to be on the bridge with him as signalman but that he could manage the gun better than any other member of the crew and took that post in the attack. The Nazi plane apparently was trying to get the gunner, he said.

Another brother, James Simpson Foley, is in Army aviation. Hubert was the first Pepco employe killed in ation and also the first member of the Holy Name Society at St. Jerome's Catholic Church in Hyattsville to be killed in action.

Georgetown U. Graduates 43 In Dentistry

The doctor and the dentist in the armed services must work together understandingly in coping with the unusual forms of diseases which our overseas men are encountering in many foreign lands, Capt. C. Raymond Wills, U. S. N., president-elect of the American Dental Association, declared at Georgetown University yesterday afternoon.

He also assured that the armed services and the dental schools would not permit the war to leave the civilian population with inefficient and inadequate dental care.

Captain Wells, who is Selective Service representative of his profession in the Navy, delivered the commencement address at the first winter graduation exercises of the Georgetown School of Dentistry. A class of 43 seniors received their diplomas in Gaston Hall from the Very Rev. Lawrence C. Gorman, S. J., president of the university. He also conferred an honorary doctor of science degree upon Captain Wells, president-elect also of the International College of Dentistry.

Dean Joseph L. B. Murray awarded prizes as follows:

Dean Cogan Dental Society prize of $25 for best scientific essay, Joseph N. Piscina of New York.

Omicron Kappa Upsilon Fraternity gold keys for high scholastic attainments during four years—Lynn Thomas Callahan, Daniel Gevinson, Joseph Anthony Granski, Albert Kalman Leon, jr., William Edwin McCain, jr., and Eugene Charles Malarik.

Mallory and Whipple prizes in pathology, Robert L. Kaplan of Florida.

Physiological chemistry prize, Joseph Wilson Love of New York.

Joseph Anthony Granski, Joseph Ralph Greco, Orlando Iacono, William Joseph Igoe, Alfred Raymond Kunkel, Leonard Joseph Leblanc, Albert Kalman Leon, jr., magna cum laude; Stanley Levin, John Theodore Lodenqual, William Edwin McCain, jr., magna cum laude; Eugene Charles Malarik, magna cum laude; William James Malone, jr., John Francis Miller.

Undersea Heroes

Two Officers From D. C. Get Awards

Two Washingtonians are among six submarine officers decorated for their services in connection with undersea warfare against the enemy, the Navy Department announced yesterday.

The Washington officers are Lieut. David B. Bell, 29, of 803 Rittenhouse Street Northwest and Lieut. John P. Currie, 29, of 632 Keefer Place Northwest. Both received the Navy and Marine Corps Medal.

Bell's citation read in part: "Constantly vigilant, Lieutenant Bell sighted a 19,600-ton enemy tanker during the midwatch and by expert maneuvering enabled his submarine to sink this valuable vessel."

Currie was cited for "extremely heroic and courageous conduct during a "highly successful and aggressive submarine war patrol in waters occupied by enemy combatant forces." The citation did not give details of his boat's achievements or in what waters it operated.

CURRIE BELL

Submarines in which the six officers served were credited by the Navy with destroying 51,750 tons of Japanese merchant shipping, sinking a 900-ton patrol vessel and a destroyer and damaging vessels totalling 5,750 tons. These attacks have been reported in Navy Communiques.

Other officers decorated were Lieut. Comdr. Creed C. Burlingame, 37, of Georgetown, Ky., gold star in lieu of a second Navy Cross; Lieut. Comdr. Willis M. Thomas, 35, of Fresno, Calif., Navy Cross; Lieut. Comdr. Carter L. Bennett, 33, Nashville, Tenn.; Silver Star; John H. Cunningham, jr., 27, Brookline, Mass., Navy and Marine Corps Medal.

Monsignor Sheen To Open Lenten Sermon Series

The Right Rev. Msgr. Fulton J. Sheen, well-known Catholic pulpit orator and faculty member of Catholic University, on Ash Wednesday at 7:30 p. m. will open a series of Lenten sermons at St. Gabriel's Catholic Church, Grant Circle Northwest, on the general theme of "Peaceful Thoughts in Wartime."

Subsequent sermons will be heard on Tuesdays during Lent, according to an announcement yesterday from the Most Rev. John M. McNamara, Auxiliary Bishop of Baltimore and Washington Archdiocese and pastor of St. Gabriel's.

D. C. Devout Prepare for Holy Season

Easter Falls on April 25; Special Service Highlights Are Announced

By Robert Tate Allan
Post Church Editor

With Ash Wednesday near, thousands of devout went to religious services yesterday to spiritually prepare themselves for Christendom's holiest season — Lent. Easter falls April 25—latest in 20 years.

TABOR

Of particular Catholic interest was the reading of Lenten regulations of the Baltimore and Washington Archdioceses in all churches. Protestant highlight was the city-wide lay workers' training conference at First Baptist Church, Sixteenth and O Streets Northwest, officially launching the "Our Capital for Christ" Lenten evangelistic project sponsored by the Washington Federation of Churches.

According to the Catholic Lenten rules, working people and families must abstain from meat on Ash Wednesday, Holy Saturday (April 24- and on all Fridays. Others are required to follow the same rules, plus abstinence from meat on Wednesdays.

Season of Fasting

All persons 21 years old and not more than 59 must fast daily, taking only one full meal. A light breakfast and lunch are suggested. Lenten regulations do not apply on Sundays.

"In view of the present emergency," Archdiocesan officials announced, "it may be that many of the faithful will not be required to abide strictly by these regulations."

"However, people are reminded that for all, without exception, the holy season of Lent should be in a special manner a time of earnest prayer, sorrow for sin and a time of self-denial, of pennace and of alms giving," the announcement declared.

Roman Catholic churches will follow the ancient custom of blessing and distributing ashes at Ash Wednesday services. The ashes used at that time are the residue of the palms blessed at last year's Palm Sunday services in Catholic churches.

Dr. Jesse M. Bader, director of the evangelism department, Federal Council of Churches, and dynamic spirit behind the National Christian Mission in 1940-41, was the principal speaker at the rally at First Baptist Church.

The Federation of Churches, central agency of more than 170 Protestant churches and allied agencies, again will sponsor weekly Lenten services at Epiphany Episcopal Church, 1317 G Street Northwest, this year on Thursdays from 5:30 to 6 p. m. Dr. J. Warren Hastings, pastor of National City Christian Church, Thomas Circle, will be the opening speaker.

Prominent Speakers

The congregation of Epiphany Church will again arrange daily noonday Lenten services, at which some of America's most prominent religious leaders will speak. Dr. Charles W. Sheerin, Epiphany's rector, will be Ash Wednesday preacher.

The congregation of historic Luther Place Memorial Church, Thomas Circle, will combine their Ash Wednesday service at 7:30 p. m. with a welcome for their new pastor, the Rev. L. Ralph Tabor. He is former pastor of Baltimore's Third Lutheran Church, and chairman of the World Action Committee, United Lutheran Church in America. His Ash Wednesday message will be "Spirit of the Prayer," and his general Lenten theme, "Toward Understanding the Lord's Prayer."

As in other years, numerous neighborhood Lenten services are planned.

Southeast Washington's Protestant churches, functioning under the Southeast Interchurch Council, will hold services daily, Saturdays and Sundays excepted, 12 to 12:30 p. m., at the Penn Theater, beginning Ash Wednesday, and continuing through Holy Thursday—April 22. Dr. Bernard K. Braskamp, pastor of Gunton-Temple Memorial Presbyterian Church, will be the initial speaker.

Meet on Thursdays

Chevy Chase warshipers will gather every Thursday at 8 p. m. at various churches in the community for Lenten services, with Chevy Chase Baptist Church as host to the opening program. Dr. Homer Clifford Richmond, pastor of Chevy Chase Methodist Church, will preach.

Upper Sixteenth Street congregations will hold Lenten services on Wednesdays at 8 p. m., beginning Ash Wednesday, when Sixth Presbyterian Church will play host. Dr. Harry W. Burgan, minister of Hamline Methodist Church, will speak.

Academy Award Winners Occasion No Surprise

Hollywood Prophets Warrant No Medals; A Lone Dissenting Voice Is Heard; Czecho-Slovakian Film Is Screened

By Ernest L. Schier

(The many friends of Nelson B. Bell were saddened to learn of the passing of his mother on Saturday morning. Mr. Bell returns to this column shortly.)

THE SUDDEN EPIDEMIC of strained shoulder ligaments, identified by arms tenderly encased in home-made slings, to be seen around town this morning, can easily be traced to those Monday morning quarterbacks who have been out-doing one another in self-imposed pats on the back occasioned by their accurate selection of the 1942 Academy Award winners.

WALTER BRENNAN

Not that we are immune from hurling a few well-selected panegyrics at our own mirrored reflection, but we hereby appoint this department a committee of one to deflate these twentieth-century Nostradamus's on the ground that this year's competition was strictly a two-horse race.

Anyone, even with a seat in the most remote section of the stands, could have told that the other entries prancing around the starting gate were no match for the thoroughbred performances of Greer Garson and Jimmy Cagney. As it was, the two winners sailed down the home stretch, leaving the entire length of the field between themselves and their disconsolate-looking rivals.

Certainly, Cagney's portrayal of George M. Cohan in Warner Brothers' film biography, "Yankee Doodle Dandy" singled him out, not only as the outstanding screen actor of the year, but also one of the most versatile and capable males in Hollywood. In Miss Garson's case, she has turned in consistently fine performances over a period of years capping them all with her fine, sensitive work in the title role of "Mrs. Miniver." Had she not won the 1942 Oscar she would have been a strong contender for honors in the 1943 trials with her work in "Random Harvest." As we see it, there was no contest.

The awards for the best supporting performances of the year went to Van Heflin for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Johnny Eager" and Teresa Wright for "Mrs. Miniver," and it is here that we crawl out on the well-known limb.

Both Mr. Heflin and Miss Wright have long been personal favorites of the writer and it is with a feeling akin to that of a Benedict Arnold that we timidly suggest two others who we believe were better deserved of the award. Unfortunately, "Johnny Eager" has not played Washington yet, so we may be underestimating Heflin, but our own candidate for the best supporting actor of the year is Anton Walbrook for his stirring contribution in "The Invaders."

Despite the shortness of Mr. Walbrook's role his brief scene as the leader of the Hutterite settlement was a high light in the history of cinema acting. Pardon us while we barricade the door against irate readers!

If you don't like our selection for the best supporting male, perhaps you will give eye to what we consider a stronger case in the feminine department. In the ingenue field Miss Wright's charm and manner is unmatched, but Agnes Moorehead's spinster aunt of "The Magnificent Ambersons" was another example of the acting art at its unsurpassed best. Now "shoot if you will this old gray head," but remember the Bill of Rights!

An interesting note on the Academy Award Dinner were the two special awards which were given out. The first of these went to Charles Boyer for his "French Research Foundation." Very few people have ever even heard of this organization, but Boyer, strong in his conviction that France will continue as a world power, has for three years been accumulating the great works of French literature, art, architecture, and intelligence.

The other award (may Will Hays preserve us!) was given for the series known as "The Hardy Family," because it "has exemplified the simple sort of people that America would like to have the rest of the world know as Americans."

Maybe so, but the last few Hardy pictures have put a strange light on those 18-year-olds who are now going into the armed services, making them look like a bunch of ape-like adolescents. Hardly a fitting description for a goodly portion of our steadily growing Army!

Before a mixed audience of Czecho-Slovakian officials, world diplomats, and a sprinkling of representatives from the cinema world, "Hangman Also Die" was previewed Saturday night in the auditorium of the National Archives. Starring Anna Lee, who was in town for the occasion, Brian Donlevy and Walter Brennan, Hollywood's tribute to the Czech people, based on the killing of Germany's infamous murderer, Heydrich, was for the most part a lengthy, melodramatic narration of German brutalities. A good job with the scissors should improve considerably its total effect.

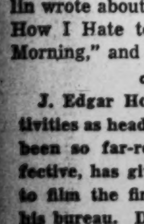
LOUELLA O. PARSONS

FBI Enlists Leo the Lion

Hollywood, March 7 (INS).—Lieut. Ronald Reagan has a military order that he loves. He has been ordered by Uncle Sam to report to his old studio, Warners, for "This Is the Army." He now has the lead originally rumored for Joseph Cotten. And who do you think plays Ronnie's dad? A war veteran from "Yip, Yip, Yaphank" days—George Murphy, no less. His dancing, no doubt, is responsible for the idea of deciding to make George look old enough to play Ronald's father.



RONALD REAGAN

The cast is pretty well set now with Joan Leslie, Una Merkel and Charlie Butterworth reporting for duty. Charlie plays the bugler, the one Irving Berlin wrote about in his song, "Oh, How I Hate to Get Up in the Morning," and Una is his wife.

J. Edgar Hoover, whose activities as head of the FBI have been so far-reaching and effective, has given his approval to film the first epic story of his bureau. Dore Schary, who spent weeks in Washington doing special research for M. G. M., is getting ready to film the dramatic story of the handling of kidnaping cases, the smashing of Interstate gangs and the bureau's job of protecting the internal security of America. But neither J. Edgar nor any member of the FBI will appear, nor will the actors portray any specific individual. Allen Rivkin, who is coauthoring the dramatic yarn with John Higgins, will include a sequence showing the FBI academy at Quantico, where special agents are trained and graduated.

When I walked on the "Madame Curie" set, at M. G. M., I half expected it to be peopled with ghosts, following the report that Greer Garson had failed to show up the starting day and that Walter Pidgeon didn't like wearing a Van Dyke, a la Pierre Curie. Instead, there were Greer and Walter, life size, with Greer laughing over the story that she had turned down Madame Curie because she had to play an older woman. "It's too silly to deny," she said. "There are only two or three scenes in the entire film in which I appear as an old woman. This is a wonderful role about a wonderful woman. I'm proud to play Madame Curie."

Choo-choo-ing East at this very moment is Anita Loos, who goes on a special job for M. G. M. She will see "Harriet," the Helen Hayes play, not for her company, but on her own. "I know," said Anita, "that Helen will be willing to star in any movie version of her play because it is her most successful one. She told me that the one movie she really wanted to do was 'Victoria Regina,' but the film rights could never be cleared in England."

Sun and Sand Alter a Corporal's Soul!

HENRY FONDA casts off timidity to become the battle-hardened soldier who leads a lost patrol through the desert's no-man's land. His transformation is accomplished at the hands of "The Immortal Sergeant," which follows "Random Harvest" into the Palace Theater. The title role is played by Thomas Mitchell, with Maureen O'Hara as a soldier's reward

HEDDA HOPPER

Greenstreet Dons a Toga

Hollywood, Calif., March 7.—Joseph Cotten will co-star with Deanna Durbin in "Hers to Hold," which is certain to get a change of title. This will be his first comedy-romantic lead, and in it Deanna plays a worker in a defense plant. Also, Gus Schilling, who went from Main Street to the movies, did so well in Deanna's last that he gets a comedy spot and they've asked him not to make any outside pictures. They have plans for him. . . . Nancy Coleman gets a goodie in "Night Shift" with Ann Sheridan. . . . Bette Davis' picture, after her three months' holiday, will be "Mrs. Skeffington." She'll make an appearance at Sugar Hill and New York's stage door canteen. Also, on her tour of Army camps in May, there's a possibility of her joining up with Kay Kyser, and if she does, I'm going, too.

Just Right

Don't suppose my suggestion had anything to do with it, but Sidney Greenstreet is set for Nero in "Quo Vadis. . . . Olivia De Haviland is loaned to Columbia, and David Hempstead of R-K-O wants her for "Government Girl." . . . Dennis Morgan did himself tons of good on that eastern trip. So did Maria Montez. In fact, she did so well the company bought her that mink coat she wanted.

"Never Heard of Her"

Just as Hollywood is thinking of doing a story to glorify itself, I come across this one. Some years ago Donald Ogden Stewart was given carte blanche to choose his own subject and do a story about it and, when ready, bring it in to the head man. He looked over all likely prospects and came to the conclusion that Jane Addams of Hull House was just what the doctor ordered. He did weeks of research and wrote a grand yarn, took it to his boss, who said: "Who's Jane Addams? Never heard of her." "Well," said Donald, "you've heard of Hull House?" His boss lifted the telephone and said: "Did you ever hear of Jane Addams at Hull House?" The assistant said: "No. Who's she?" He turned with a smile to Donald and said: "See? Nobody ever heard of her. Get another subject."

About Time

Martha Scott due back here soon and, together witht Adolphe Menjou, will start in "Hi Diddle Diddle" for Andrew Stone. It's definitely on the frothy side. . . . Congratulations to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for signing Gladys Cooper. She's a fine actress, and on my first trip to London she was the toast of the town, and most beautiful woman there. . . . Recently when Scotty Dunlap and wife were guests at Earl Carroll's, Scotty told Paul, head waiter, whom he's known for years, that when the Boston fire started, in which he was badly burned, he and Buck Jones thought it was just another night club brawl.

Think You'll Agree

Fred Astaire swears he's playing the nicest character ever assigned him in "The Sky's the Limit." Says: "I've always dreamed of getting a part like this." Plays a flyer on furlough, but out of uniform on a special mission, who meets up with Joan Leslie. Then just goes into a charming man of the world, who's a bit off center, carefree, who does every thing Fred would like to have done in real life—knowing that he's going off probably to die on his next flight. Nice to see him working again with Eric Blore, who was in so many of his former pictures when he and Ginger were together. Then, too, working with Ned Griffith relaxes you. He knows a good thing when he sees it.

Wonderful Playground

Irving Rapper, just back from Mexico, is arranging his schedule so he can get back there soon. Says, "That is really manana." Almost every one I know is planning a picture or two down there. Irving's working like mad on the life of Gershwin, and when it starts rolling I'll bet anything John Garfield will play the part . . . Dick Thorpe bought a home in Connecticut. He'll be a neighbor to Tallulah Bankhead. While in New York he came across three likely screen personalities, took tests of them on 16 mm. film so higher-ups at Metro can look at 'em. Some years ago there was an article written about "Don't train your child to be a majorette." Yet here's Roy del Ruth doing it—training eight of them to twirl those batons for a musical.

O, Baby, Be Good!

When C. B. DeMille asked Paulette Goddard and Ray Millard to star in his "Reap the Wild Wind," he had the first promise it would be done on dry land. In the picture they were soaked to the skin daily, worked through cloudbursts, and hurricanes, and that good old debbil sea . . . Hope you didn't miss Herbert Marshall and Virginia Bruce in "This Above All." Also the clowning of Fred Allen when Phil Baker took over his show. That's the kind of fun we've been longing for on the air.

Shavings

As Dorothy Parker watched Diosa Costello rumba at La Conga she remarked: "That only goes to show how far you can go in this world with a shaky background!" . . . Bob Benchley, speaking of a certain actress, said: "She has more brass than the metal collection drive needs!"

Trans-Lux

"Prelude to Victory," the March of Time's most recent issue, is devoted to the story behind the invasion of North Africa. Between the recent headlines of the President's flight to Casablanca, and the expected military campaign into Europe, it's news value is very well balanced. For the first time the camera comprehensively reveals the months of tedious, painstaking work that went into the movement of enormous supplies and troops to the Mediterranean-bound shore of Africa that will serve as a jumping off place for future action against the Axis. Graphically unveiled is the course of the United Nations convoy, with enlightening glimpses of the country and people where our soldiers are now stationed. Rapidly paced and dramatically narrated it is both exciting and absorbing.

"Public Sport No. 1," a short subject will capture the attention of all sports fans. Devoted to the inside story of baseball, it is embellished by demonstrations of the art of throwing the white pellet across the plate by such outstanding exponents as Hank Danning, Whit Wyatt and Mort Cooper. Should baseball suffer a sudden demise, addicts will be able to stand up under the shock with such films as this.

General Arnold's tour of the Far East to confer with high officers of United States and British military missions heads the list of items covered in the newsreels. Also included are scenes of Allied aerial action in Africa, the return of Corpl. Barney Ross from Guadalcanal and glimpses of the National A. A. U. track and field meet.

"There's Something About a Soldier," a color cartoon, and the Victory Reel, "Arsenals of Might," round out a varied program.

Loose-Leaf Notebook

New York, March 7.

Kay Francis revealed this story yesterday about her recent trip abroad: In London she met a soldier who told her of his friend another soldier stationed in Africa. "Here is his name, his number, his regiment," said the soldier, and wrote these details on a slip of paper which he gave to her. "Maybe you'll find a chance to look him up." . . . When Kay together with Martha Raye, Carole Landis and Mitzie Mayfair, arrived in North Africa, they were surrounded by thousands of American troops. All of them drew lots—the lucky four winners to escort the four ladies that evening. The sergeant whose number won him an evening with Kay Francis stepped up to claim his prize. His was the name on that slip of paper Kay carried from London.

If Rodzinski doesn't apologize to the musicians, he may resign . . . Toscanini now is resting comfortably in Philadelphia. He made this tour against his doctors' orders. The Maestro's temperature isn't above normal. It's below normal . . . Lieut. Roark Bradford's New Orleans house has been rented by five WAVES.

Harry Carey, the film star, was in Washington last week and registered at the same hotel where Pvt. Garson Kanin resides. Kanin is the young movie director for whom Carey had worked in "They Knew What They Wanted" . . . Harry learned that Kanin was in a room two floors below his. And he had heard reports of the amazingly poor telephone service now prevalent in Washington. He decided to test it . . . Carey telephoned Kanin's room. When the operator said: "One moment please," Harry gave the phone to his wife, went downstairs to Kanin's room—and was there for 22 minutes before his own call to that room was put through.

The London Daily Express is really putting its experts to the test. Six by-line writers for that paper now are making joint public appearances to answer questions put to them by the audiences . . . M.-G.-M., via Dory Schary, will produce a movie about J. Edgar Hoover's FBI. The story is by Allen Rivkin and John Higgins . . . "Stutterin' Sam" Dowell, the Billy Rose showgirl who has been at the Diamond Horseshoe for more than four years, is taking singing lessons to cure her stuttering, so that she can join the WAACS . . . Matthew Holton, who has been covering the desert warfare for the Toronto Star, is in New York now, showing the new credentials being issued by Britain for its war correspondents. To the credentials are added a list of instructions to commanding officers. The instructions read: "Correspondents are to be treated as officers, and they are to have all the privileges of officers—that is, they are to be allowed to go anywhere, no secrets are to be kept from them, and they are not to be permitted to interfere with the progress of the battles."

The "Frazer Wilson" who sold a short story to Liberty last week really is a collaboration—Phyllis Frazer, the noted cousin of Ginger Rogers, and Budd Wilson Schulberg, the author of "What Makes Sammy Run" . . . The grocery-store scene was cut from the movie, "The Human Comedy," because many of the grocery items mentioned now are being rationed. OPA may release that cut scene as a movie short on rationing . . . A businessman from Twenty-eighth Street and Seventh Avenue was invited to lunch at the Ritz-Carlton, studied the menu and noticed that coffee cost 40 cents a cup. "In that case," he told the waiter, "it should be on the wine list."

Elliott Paul, the author of "The Last Time I Saw Paris," escaped from Spain with his family and servants, on a Nazi pocket battleship, by posing as a Franco supporter . . . Saturday night Paul dined with his friend, J. Alvarez del Vayo, the foreign minister of Republican Spain. Paul was asked what he thought of Hitler's chances in Spain, and he delivered a 15-minute opinion. Del Vayo then asked him what he thought of North Africa, of Ciano's dismissal, of Argentina's neutrality, and of Wallace's speeches. Paul gave 30-minute opinions. "Now, what do you think of Elliot Paul?" del Vayo asked . . . Paul hesitated, and then confessed: "I never thought of that. That's a problem which is too complicated."

Gayety

"BLACK AND WHITE REVUE." The Independent Burlesque Association presents the musical attraction in 2 acts and 29 scenes, featuring Nancy Blair, Tiny Fuller, Harry LeVan, Patricia Morgan, Betty Allen, Ralph Wilson, Harris and Howell, Gus Screen, Dolores Brown, Stuart Flash and Harris and Howell. Dance numbers devised by Shirley Paige.

Since your reviewer joins the U. S. Army this week, it is a pleasure to report that the last review he "covered" at the Gayety turns out to be one of the finest and funniest seen here this season. Entitled "The Black and White Revue," the production has an all-star cast of troupers who have much to offer in the way of entertainment.

Headlining the first portion of the bill is Nancy Blair, a stunning brunette, who is not only easy on the eyes but a lass whose songs and musical specialities are first-rate.

The comedy is furnished by Tiny Filler ("A Ton of Fun") and Harry "Shuffles" LeVan, with the able assistance of Ralph White, a capable straight man. Suffice to say, the boys have a wealth of material any many amusing and witty comedy "situations" to offer the record crowd on hand.

Lack of space will not allow us the opportunity of telling you, in detail, all the sepian entertainers do to make this particular show one of the best editions seen here, but the entire combination, including Harris and Howell, comedy team; Gus Screen and Strut Flash, dancers, and the singing of Dolores Brown will afford you almost three hours of topnotch entertainment.

So, until we meet again, here's a cheer for Manager Ferber and the entire Gayety staff, and may burlesque and the performers numbered among its ranks "keep us laughing."—ART JOHN.

Screwball Gadgets

Home inventors who putter around the house, devising handy gadgets to simplify household chores, will be intrigued by the knick-knacks Victor Moore dreams up for the parlor, bedroom and bath of his home in "True to Life."

Betty Field's portrayal of Mrs. William Morton, wife of the discoverer of the anasthetic, covers a 20-year span, in "Great Without Glory." She is seen first as a middle-aged widow, then as a young bride.

Mary Haworth's Mail

In College, Girl Got Engaged to One Student, but Later Fell in Love With Another, After Her Fiance Graduated; Which of the 2 Men Should She Marry?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am engaged to be married to a young man with whom I have "dated" for about four years. We met in college and he finished school a year before I did. Therefore, he suggested that I have other boy friends in my senior year, when he wouldn't be there. (We were already engaged at the time.) So I started going with another boy,—and I am now in love with him. That's what makes the problem.

Both boys are in the Army at present; and all my friends as well as Bob's (the first boy) expect us to marry. I believe I could live with Bob, but I feel that I would be much happier with Ned (the second boy). However, Ned hadn't finished college when he joined the Army, and all the girls in my set,—as well as all the girls in our family connection,—have married professional men. Ned plans to get his degree after the war,—by working in the summers and saving money for the school season. This might mean waiting rather indefinitely to be married. But, of course, Ned would not return to college if I objected.

Ned's home is in a Northern city and he says that even without a college education, he could easily make enough to take care of a family. I believe my family would rather I married Bob, because of social and financial considerations, since he could offer "security" from the very start. It is very hard for me to make a decision. I don't know whether I am in love with Bob, or just so sympathetic toward him that I don't want to hurt him by breaking our engagement. I am hoping you can help me clarify my mind.

CONFUSED.

To Wed Without Love Makes Double Trouble

DEAR CONFUSED: If the most you can say for being married to Bob is, "I believe I could live with him, but—," then I certainly think you should call off the engagement, as much for his sake as your own. You would be doing him no kindness in boredly becoming his bride, for expedient reasons; and you would be doing yourself a great deal of harm, in the psychic and emotional domains of personality, in following the path of least resistance to "sign away your life" to one man, when you felt that your heart belonged to another man, whom you would have much preferred to marry, if only you had possessed the courage to run counter to the social pressure of popular opinion or expectation.

Although you have presented your dilemma in terms of a compound question, namely, "Whether to marry Bob or Ned?"—it seems to me the situation actually requires you to solve the riddle of your "intention" toward each boy, without particular reference to your attachment to the other. Thus, even though your distinctly negative —and almost positively reluctant,—attitude toward the prospect of marrying Bob is enough to convince any disinterested person that you ought not to marry him (while you feel that way), it certainly does not follow that you should, therefore, jump to the conclusion that Ned is your "fate." I haven't said: "Don't marry Bob, because you love Ned." I have said, rather: "Don't marry Bob, because you don't love him. And since you don't love him, have the integrity to break the engagement, setting him free and yourself likewise, to make a more suitable choice."

Her Big Romance Hasn't Dawned Yet

As for what to do about Ned,—in view of his present status and uncertain future prospects, you have plenty of time to decide that question. I am not at all convinced that your currently greater attachment to him is to be rated as "love." Rather, I think it ought to be construed simply as proof that you are sufficiently immature and unsettled, emotionally, to be most susceptible,—at this level of experience,—to the attentions of whichever presentable suitor is "johnny-on-the-spot." And if you will bear in mind that the more you saw of Ned, the better you liked him and the less you "loved" Bob,—you have an inkling of what could happen in the next year or two, if you should start "dating" steadily with some other young man, while Bob and Ned are away at war. In other words, it is perfectly possible that you will have outgrown your tentative desire to marry Ned, long before he is mustered out of service,—on account of having switched your affections to still another quarter, in the meantime.

What your story of confused indecision really amounts to, then, is an indirect revelation of the fact that you have not yet emerged from the adolescent stage of romantic excitment and uncertainty in regard to insistent suitors that is generally known as being "in love with love." It is unsafe ground from which to make a permanent choice of life partner. I should judge from your letter that you are not more than 20 years of age; and I would advise you to allow yourself about three more years to deliberate, before taking that destiny-shaping step.

Don't Be in a Hurry To Settle for Life

And in closing, perhaps I should state my opinion that if you were to meet Bob and Ned for the first time, three years from now, in all probability you would be immediately more attracted to the former than the latter. By this, I do not mean to suggest that you stay engaged to Bob, in the strained hope of learning to love him. I simply suggest that he is "more your kind;" and that, in refusing to take either Bob or Ned seriously, you should pursue your husband-hunt in terms of finding a man who does fit professionally into your background scheme of things, while at the same time completely winning your heart. Home Canning Pays Housewife Dividends in Rationing Days

Mrs. Andrew G. Weaver starts her home-canned dinner by first preparing chicken pie. Beans and peaches, also from her home-canned food, will contribute to her dinner menu

By Martha Ellyn

Home canning may seem a bunch of "twiddle-twaddle" to some women. That's not the case with Mrs. Andrew G. Weaver, 3915 Fifth Street Northwest. Canning of foods has been a habit of this thrifty homemaker long before the Government's long arm precipitated the eclipse of the can opener.

Martha Ellyn

It was not clairvoyance but good common sense and planning that prompted Mrs. Weaver to can fruits, vegetables and meats during the last year. This is a procedure she has followed since she learned to can Georgia peaches in her home State when a girl.

Last harvest season Mrs. Weaver saw the "writing on the wall" so exerted every effort to preserve food by pressure cooker, hot water bath and cold pack process. Farmers' Bulletin No. 1762, "Home Canning of Fruits, Vegetables and Meats," compiled by the Bureau of Home Economics, Department of Agriculture, obtainable for 10 cents at the Superintendent of Documents, Washington, D. C., is Mrs. Weaver's canning guide.

The actual experience of Washingtonians in handling the food situation, I think is the best way to give help to Post readers. I've become a Kitchen Invader, ringing doorbells and telephones asking women how they are getting along with food rationing.

It was a surprise when Mrs. Weaver told me that she considered home canning the silver lining in her meal planning. To have such a food reserve as she has in these days is indeed a joy. Most any woman will consider the effort worthwhile when she considers the delicious meals possible through home canning. Moral: Look to home canning.

A chicken in the can is Mrs. Weaver's way to a chicken in the pot. With chicken and gravy as a point of departure, you can branch out in all sorts of ways. It is chicken pie that Mrs. Weaver suggests as an appealing dish made from her home canned foods. Here is a menu that she serves frequently. Serve it to your hungry ones, using a plump, freshly killed chicken, if you don't have yours in a can.

Dinner Menu

Chicken Pie
Home Canned Green Beans
Carrot-Cabbage-Apple Salad
Hot Biscuits
Fortified Margarine
Deep Dish Apple Pie
Coffee

The chicken, beans and peaches for the pie all came from the home-canned foods on the shelves in Mrs. Weaver's basement. The chicken pie is the kind that is made with bits of biscuit dough through the chicken as well as being topped with biscuits. No peas, carrots or potatoes should find their way into a real Southern chicken pie says Mrs. Weaver.

The deep dish peach pie for which the recipe follows is made with honey so as to conserve the sugar supply.

DEEP DISH PEACH PIE

Simmer 1 pint home canned peaches to thicken the juice. Add ½ cup honey. Pour all into a shallow casserole. Add a dash of nutmeg and dot with 1 tablespoon margarine broken into bits. Over all place pie crust rolled rather thick. Secure edges. Bake in 325 degree oven for about 25 minutes. Serve with cream. Serves 6.

Your Baby and Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

When the weather moderates and groups of children begin to congregate in the back yards for play, the child exposed to the mixed society of companions of his own age and older is bound to show some of the influences of that companionship.

The mother would be strange indeed who did not see in his new use of profanity, his new tendency to be aggressively rude and indifferent to control, the "pernicious" influence of other children.

Yet, no matter where one lives this influence is certain to be felt. There are no perfect neighborhoods and no perfect children. This tendency in any group is for the behavior of the worst child to become the behavior of all of them.

Does this mean that mothers must keep their children at home? Since play with other children is a part of growth, how then shall one deal with these temporary influences?

Let us keep in mind that whatever the influences a group of children has on our exemplary child, our influence is far stronger and more permanent. Naturally, he hears new words and he tries them out on us. He hears explanations about sex which may be far different and more exciting than what he has been told by us. He makes an effort to do at home what other children say they can do.

But, does he get away with it? Not if we are the family we say we are. We have standards. We have patterns of conduct and we have been busy instilling them and keeping them active from the day the child was born. If a group of individuals can in a few months ruin the years of influence we have been wielding, then surely there is something very wrong with our methods or our example.

When children shout words that curl our hair, should we wring our hands? By no means. Say calmly: "Even if Herbert uses such words I'm sorry, you can't use them around here. That isn't the way we talk."

When children begin to whisper in corners, with a wicked gleam in their eyes, perhaps it's as well to review the whole subject of sex information and see wherein we may have failed to make it understandable. The child who has honest sex information won't be bowled over by what some other child whispers to him.

Even though a chance companion may so influence a child as to cause him to imitate him temporarily, our child's character will be molded by the 24-hour-a-day influence of good parents, with right ideals and stable conduct, to which he has been exposed from birth.

"Answering a Child's Questions About Babies" may be had by sending a 3-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Myrtle Meyer Eldred, in care of this newspaper. This is for those mothers who have put off giving this essential information.

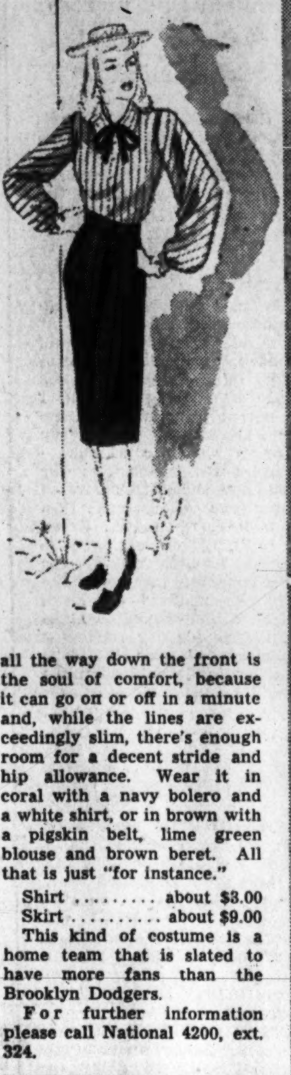
THE REAL McCOY . .

By Jeanne Contini



This spring a new fashion has been born that is designed to take the United States by storm; The Shirtwaist and Skirt! While we didn't participate in a lot of the whoop and holler that accompanied certain of the style eccentricities which were a natural by-product of the fashion industry gearing itself to war, we feel justified in getting excited about this. And so will you.

It's Democratic. It is becoming to all figures and adaptable to all budgets.

It allows plenty of scope for individual free expression. If nine women out of every ten were to wear it, there would be enough versions to permit each one to look different.

It's of our time. It's practical, easy to wear and to condition, infinitely variable with relatively few basic units.

We don't have to be a Cassandra to know how logical this fashion is for Washington in general and for the Government girl in particular.

Sketched is just one of the innumerable possibilities. The Shirt is a peppermint striped rayon . . . quite classic but with rather full sleeves. The neckline is convertible. We show it high, and have added the shoe-string tie in black velvet of a Southern Senator. The Skirt is trouser-pleated, fly-fronted, rayon gabardine. It comes in any one of about seven lovely colors.

The solo performance of either member of this duo is irreproachable. Obviously the shirt is ideal for a suit, but also consider wearing it with a navy dinner skirt and a bunch of field flowers at your waist, or over a pair of red linen slacks, or with a pair of forest green shorts. The trouser skirt, which buttons all the way down the front is the soul of comfort, because it can go on or off in a minute and, while the lines are exceedingly slim, there's enough room for a decent stride and hip allowance. Wear it in coral with a navy bolero and a white shirt, or in brown with a pigskin belt, lime green blouse and brown beret. All that is just "for instance."

Shirt . . . . about $3.00
Skirt . . . . about $9.00

This kind of costume is a home team that is slated to have more fans than the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

If your weight is within reason and your measurements are not, the bulk of the evidence is that you are soft. Where the measurement is worst, the muscles are the softest. Those are the muscles most in need of exercise. In the general run of figures the spread covers the entire midsection—stomach, waist and hips.

You have a few weeks between now and Easter. If you will do exercises for the important midsection muscles every day during that time, you will not only have a lovelier figure for the Easter parade, but you will feel like a new person.

Begin with an exercise to firm and flatten the stomach. Lie on your back on the floor, knees flexed and feet on floor close to buttocks. First, dig the small of the back down into the floor—this means pulling up and in with the lower abdominal muscles. Continue to pull up and in with those muscles and slowly raise hips off the floor until your body is in a straight line from knees to chest. Hold it for an instant, then extend the right leg until your entire right side is in a straight line from ankle to chest. Now comes the hard part: Slowly lower hips to floor and at the same time raise the right leg straight up in the air. When the hops are again resting on the floor, the right leg should be straight up in the air to form a right angle with the trunk, but your left knee should still be flexed, foot on floor. Hold for the fraction of a minute, then slowly lower right leg to floor, dig the small of back down into floor, and try to keep it flat as you slide the left leg down. Relax. Repeat, alternating legs. There are several steps to this exercise, but it is really very simple and most effective. Be careful to make each movement accurate. Do not arc the small of the back when holding hips off floor, and do not bend the knee as you raise the leg to right angle.

Next, a waistline stretcher.

Stand on knees on floor, trunk erect, midriff pulled slim, and arms straight out at sides from shoulders. Keep your arms and shoulders in the same straight line and slowly bend sideward at waist to try to touch fingers to floor. Do not lower your arm at the shoulder in order to touch the floor, or let the hips go back, or bend at the hip joints. Make those muscles along the outward bend of the waist s-t-r-e-t-c-h. Straighten up and repeat to other side. From the same starting position, twist at waist to touch right hand to left heel in back, then to touch left hand to right heel. Again, keep hips in line, stomach muscles pulled up and twist only at the waist.

And One Flew West

By Anne Tedlock Brooks

CHAPTER XXII

Judith had lunch at home with Jack. He was at the table when she came in and he seemed in an unusually serious mood. The morning paper, which she hadn't had time to read either at breakfast or at the Shuffleboard, was spread out in front of him. He folded it hastily when she entered the room and tossed it on a chair to one side.

"Nasty mess, wasn't it?" he said, rising and pulling out a chair at the table.

Judith looked at him puzzled. "What was a nasty mess?"

Jack took a deep breath and frowned, obviously wishing he hadn't mentioned it. "Those Army training planes cracking up," he said at last. "It's in the headlines. Three of them, in midair. It's the worst accident they've had -- and goodness knows they don't have many. Apparently two of the pilots got buck fever—or whatever they call it in aviation—and crashed into one another. Then one of their planes went haywire and slammed into another one that had just taken off."

The story made Judith feel suddenly weak. She couldn't help thinking of the four youngsters she'd had up for their first flights this morning, and who would some day not long off be taking the same kind of training—perhaps even at the same place—that these boys who had crashed had been taking. And undoubtedly before that day would come, Jinx Atwood would be called. He'd go first; then probably Hugh. Dorne Stells had gone already. Johnny Sinclair was waiting for his summons.

"Maybe you're smart not to read the papers," Jack was saying. "But it's a habit with me. Right now, especially, I scan every page of the darn things looking for articles about flying. It's a dangerous game, Judy. Sometimes I wish that you'd——"

"Please, Jack!" Judith interrupted quickly. "Don't start that again. We always wind up at each other's throats, and I don't feel like fighting right now. . . . I was just thinking about something that I—I can't understand . . .

The telephone rang then and it was for her. Jinx was calling and he seemed annoyed that she had gone home for lunch.

"I've been looking all over for you, honey," he said. "I wanted you to have lunch with me."

Judith laughed, feeling a little tug at her heart at sound of his voice. "I haven't started to eat yet, Jinx," she said. I'll meet you some place, if you like—or would you care to come here and eat with Jack and me?"

Jinx didn't want to do that, so they agreed to meet at the Green Shutter, a roadhouse a couple of miles from the field. "In about 15 minutes," Judith said. "I'll leave right away."

Jinx was already there when she arrived. She found him at the bar and his flushed face alarmed her. "So early in the day?" she said, forcing a smile through the involuntary frown.

"Now, Judy, old girl," he said, his voice a shade too thick," don't start preaching. I had to have a drink because I have a very important question to ask you." He swung around off the bar stool and, taking her hand, led her to a table off in one corner.

"You have me all in a dither, darling," Judith said. "What is this question that's so terribly important?"

Jinx smiled thinly. "I imagine you could guess, if you cared to," he said, "but you don't need to do that. The question is simple and as old as mankind itself. It's simply this. Judy: Will you marry me?"

Judith was stunned, genuinely so, although it was obvious that Jinx thought her surprise affected. "Married?" she said unsteadily. "You mean now, Jinx?"

Jinx nodded. "I mean now. Right away. This week. Tomorrow. Today, if possible."

"But why, Jinx? Why so suddenly I—I don't understand."

"Oh, sure you do, darling," he said, narrowing his eyes. "I love you—and love doesn't like being kept waiting."

"But you—you aren't serious, Jinx!" Judith protested. "You'll be going into the Air Corps almost any day now. We wouldn't have any time together, I couldn't go with you when you start training——"

Jinx smiled enigmatically. "Sometimes," he said, "a person can take things like that into his own hands."

Judith studied him for a moment, pondering his word. Then she said, "You mean I should give up my work at the field, disrupt the entire program at Graves Field and put an impossible burden on Johnny Sinclair—just so we could have a few days of married happiness? No, Jinx. I could never do that."

"That wasn't exactly what I meant," Jinx said. "But it's close enough."

For the second time in less than an hour Judith felt sudden nausea and she got up from the table quickly, "I'm sorry, Jinx. I—I think I'd better get back to the field." She turned and almost ran from the room.

What Will Happen to America's Breakfast?

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

There are at least two kinds of people: first, those who regard breakfast as The King of the Meals and the others, who regard it as a chore to be got through with as rapidly as possible.

Generally, I should say as far as observation is concerned, that Continental Europeans almost universally fall into the second group. Breakfast in France is something to make a traveling American shudder. I once saw an old Frenchman breakfasting at Mont St. Michel. He was in the dining room for an hour after I started to observe him.

He was eating some sort of roll or biscuit that had never been thoroughly cooked and had not been toasted and looked as if it had been used to plug up a rat hole. This he would munch while the crumbs fell all over his beard and night shirt, which was the costume he had chosen to wear to breakfast, and then he would wash his mouth out with a mixture of cool coffee, chicory and milk. Later on he hit some red wine and got down to the business of the day.

The English breakfast, which was inherited by our Plymouth Rock ancestors and to which they were loyal for a long time, is likely to be something like cold veal in cool gravy, cool mashed potatoes, beefsteak and onions, ham and eggs, pancakes and syrup, etc.

I do not know the exact reasons for the evolution of the standard American breakfast. I imagine the reasons were partly climatic, partly due to our industrious way of life and partly historical. But standard it has become. "Orange juice, toast and coffee," which must be of fairly recent origin.

In the seventeenth century the English merchant marine began bringing back to England the exotic products of other lands. In this Diary, Samuel Pepys records that he drank a pint of orange juice and was very much surprised that he did not become ill . . . "It being new, I was doubtful whether it might do me hurt."

I do not know how rationing will affect this part of the standard breakfast. Orange juice is very rich nutritionally, not for its mineral content, but for its vitamin C content. However, if oranges are affected by rationing, we can turn to another of our comparatively new vegetables and use tomato juice, which is also very nutritious, contains vitamin C and, according to an eminent physiologist, both infants and adults can tolerate three times as much tomato juice as orange juice.

Flour, we are promised in abundance, so we will always have the second staple of the American breakfast, toast. But Heaven knows what will happen to our allotment of coffee.

Much Unexplored Water in World Says Admiral

(This is another in the series of stories about the men who are running the war. The next will appear on Friday.)

By Patricia Grady

REAR ADMIRAL GEORGE SLOAN BRYAN

For a really comprehensive map's eye view of the world, drop in on Rear Admiral George Sloan Bryan, retired, and ask him to show you through his Suitland domain.

As hydrographer of the Navy Department, there's very little about the world's geographic or climatic conditions that this tall, slow-spoken officer doesn't know. The oceans, of course, are his particular province and it's his job to see that our men of the sea have the latest possible information about the dozens of factors necessary to safe and accurate navigation.

Maps and graphs by the thousands are turned out from the presses of his office, as information pours in from all over the world of changing currents, newly discovered danger spots, derelicts and more accurate soundings. This office, which celebrated its centennial anniversary of occupancy of the old Naval Hospital the day it moved out to Suitland, has built a world-wide reputation of efficiency and excellence during the long years of its history. Our maps have become the by-word of sea-faring men everywhere.

Sea and Air Need Different Type Maps

"You need a different kind of map for driving a horse and buggy than for driving a fast automobile," comments the admiral in answer to a question about air navigation. "There is a similar difference between the maps required for sea and air navigation. You have to figure more rapidly in the air with less chance of accuracy. Good navigation on a ship is to come within a mile of your actual position. In a plane, if you come within 5 miles you have nothing to worry about. Then, of course, new techniques such as radio beams make the discussion of some kinds of navigation academic."

To adequately read the maps that line Admiral Bryan's office would take the training of a graph technician, but there is one map that even a layman can understand. Small arrows scattered over the map show the direction of winds and currents. The Hyrographic Office is making these maps on rubberized material and every lifeboat will carry one. A guess at your position and a glance at the map will show you what land you can reach with the greatest possible assistance from the elements.

Four Million Maps a Month

A capable administrator, this painstaking admiral has had to step up map production many times over to meet our wartime demands. In a peacetime year about 400,000 of these graphs—acknowledged to be the finest charts of their kind in the world—were turned out. Now this office has met the demand for as many as four million a month.

Navigation techniques have, of course, taken a spurt under the impetus of war and new information is pouring in from heretofore unexplored and unimportant parts of the oceans. Information for these charts cannot be gathered overnight so the hydrographer has to have a military crystal ball and gather his information many months in advance for places he thinks may become strategic. Long before Greenland became militarily important, the Hydrographic Office was conducting surveys there with the ships and men of its command. They've guessed right pretty consistently, but Admiral Bryan grows woebegone at the mention of certain parts of the South Pacific. There's just so much you can do with the material at hand and there's too much unexplored water in the world to suit the hydrographer.

"Topsy" Is An Assistant Secretary

Pictures of former Hydrographers hang on one wall of Admiral Bryan's office, a big wooden globe of the last century fills one corner—this globe was so big it wouldn't fit through the doors so the admiral had it hoisted up through his office windows—drawers of graphs line the walls and thumb-tack covered maps are everywhere. On Thursdays, when Mrs. Bryan is fulfilling her duties at a hospital as a Gray Lady, the most appealing member of the admiral's staff is on hand. Topsy, a well-mannered cocker, spends his day retrieving "memoranda" from the floor and bringing it to the admiral's attention.

Admiral Bryan, whose brother-in-law, Maj. Gen. Alexander Patch, has been making headlines at Gaudalcanal, regrets only one thing about his new headquarters in Maryland. He can't work late in the evenings. As a member of a car pool, he has to leave at an appointed time.

Although he is not an athlete himself—he describes his golf as "atrocious"—he loves sports of all kinds. He is an enthusiast for competitive sports in and of themselves, whether he has a team to support or not. With his wife and two sons, who are under fighting age and still going to school, he lives a quiet life in his home on McKinley Street.

Was Awarded The Navy Cross

Although he hasn't been back to his home in North Carolina since he was a boy, Admiral Bryan's Carolina drawl is unimpaired. His sons, who have never spent any time in the South, seem to have inherited his accent. He was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1906 and had most of his sea duty as an engineering officer. For his work during the war with the Asiatic Fleet and as a transportation officer, he was awarded the Navy Cross.

In 1937 he was ordered to the Hydrographic Office and in the fall of the next year took over his post of Hydrographer.

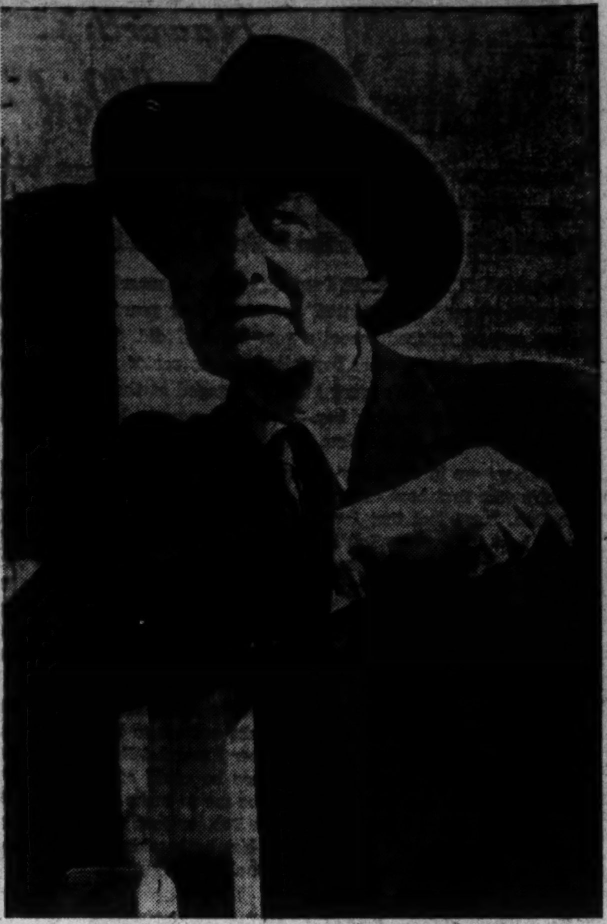
Bronx Cowboy Who Made Good in Hollywood Now Worried About Plight of Small Ranchers

Harry Carey, Here For Air Force Premiere, Tells of Beef Black Market

By Elizabeth Henney



HARRY CAREY

"Pop owned a horse-car line in New York, so I got interested in horses when I was pretty young." "Pop" was Judge Henry DeWitt Carey of Westchester County, New York, and the speaker was Henry Carey, better known to the public at large as Harry Carey, veteran actor of 367 movie roles, who has just risen to new heights in his career (at the age of 67) as the crew chief of the "Mary Ann" in the new Warner picture, "Air Force."

Here for the grand premiere of the picture, which is almost a documentary report of the service of a bomber in the siege at Pearl Harbor, Mr. Carey, when asked point-blank about his role, had this to say about it:

"I really liked my part in 'Air Force.' As crew chief of the 'Mary Ann' I'm a plain sort of an old cuss in soiled clothes and practically no make-up at all except a liberal smear of engine grease and dirt. There isn't much a director can do with a horse face like mine, except give me homespun parts and I'm grateful for them, too. It's fun to be paid for being just the kind of guy I'd like to be in private life."

Prefers to Talk Of Ranching

And that was that as far as films went. Yes, of course he was polite and earnest about answering any questions about his career and various roles, but the one subject he will talk about at the drop of the hat (and be perfectly willing to drop any number of hats himself for the purpose) is the subject of cattle ranching, and the plight of the small rancher. He himself has only about 1700 acres (yes seventeen hundred acres is correct) which he considers awfully small potatoes in that line. You have to have 25 or 30 thousand acres to really qualify as a big time rancher, according to Mr. Carey.

A Bronx cowboy who made good at the business, Mr. Carey is extremely perturbed about two problems of the present day small rancher; subsidies and the black market.

As to the subsidies he thinks that one of the principal produce problems of the country would be solved if the Government would subsidize the small ranchers. With only small subsidies, he maintains, those small ranches could increase many times their present output, and thereby solve a tremendous proportion of the present-day food problems.

Cattle Rustling Has Come Again

And for the other problem; cattle rustling days have come again to California. And just like the days of the old Western film thrillers, when Harry Carey himself rode, buckety-buckety on the side of law in those rootin'-tootin' thrillers; he is again campaigning, in a much quieter but no less effective way, on the side of the law and the ranchers.

And he quotes as an example a most interesting incident which would indicate that even now, some of our Western lawmakers need to temper their decisions with a little more justice.

It seems, according to Mr. Carey, that the present day rustlers do things in a modern fashion. On a nice dark night they herd a few cattle into a corner of a fence pasture. Then they make a break in the fence; either slaughter the cattle and drag them through, or else drive them onto the road and run them down with trucks. Anyway, come morning, the truck and the carcasses are far, far from the spot, and inside the trucks are men busily slicing the carcasses into steaks to be sold at fancy prices in the current black market.

Now, years ago, according to Harry Carey, the California ranchers, in order to stamp out cattle rustling, succeeded in getting a law passed, which meant an automatic 15-year penitentiary sentence for anyone caught rustling cattle.

"Justice, Whence Hast Thou Fled?"

Well, it seems, says Mr. Carey, that recently two men were caught red-handed in the act of skinning some branded cattle on the corner of a rancher's property. When brought to court they tried to settle by paying for the cattle. This was refused by the rancher, on the theory that this was the time to stop the return of the cattle rustler once and for all. So-o-, according to Mr. Carey, the judge ruled that since the men were skinning a carcass, they were only stealing meat; that rustling applied to removing live cattle on the hoof—and fined the men accordingly—no prison sentence. And Mr. Carey and a lot of other ranchers want to know whence hath justice fled.

Harry Carey, mediumly tall, slender, quietly dressed, and with the leathery and lined countenance that comes from years of riding the ranges has a genuine and friendly quality strangely reminiscent of the late Will Rogers; and like that other famous cowboy, Mr. Carey has two children, a boy and a girl. Dobie, who is just 21 and whose real name is Henry George Carey (named after both grandfathers, explains his father), has just gone into the service and is at a Navy boot camp somewhere in Idaho.

"Mother Carey" Plays Many Roles

Cappy, the daughter of the family, was training for a threatrical career via the stock companies, when the war came on. Knowing of the desperate need for nurses in the hospital of the small town of Newhall, near the Carey ranch, she is now on full time duty there.

Last, but not least, is Olive, called Ollie by all the family, who started life as a young actress, one of an acting family, married Harry Carey some 30 years ago, and has filled most competently the roles of housewife and mother as well as those of secretary and watchdog over her hardworking husband.

As the luncheon party reluctantly broke up, 'Mother Carey' was saying about her principal chick: "We may go on to New York for a week, but I almost hope not. It's no rest for Harry. He keeps wanting to go out to all the camps and give the boys a show. It's grand for them, and he likes to do it, and I like him to, but he uses up too much of his strength, and right now he needs a real rest."

While over in another corner of the room Harry Carey was saying, "Yes it was tough to see Dobie go, he's my only boy. But he wants to help all he can and I'm glad he can go. Meantime I want to do service pictures from now on. They're doing a swell job those service boys, all of the services, and I'd like to help show how good a job. I think next, and real soon, I'd like to do a Merchant Marine picture. Those boys have a really tough job."

Japs Forecast Labor Unrest, Adm. Byrd Tells Plane Workers

By the Associated Press

Seattle, March 7.—Japanese war lords have been using fore knowledge of the labor unrest in the Pacific Coast aircraft industry in their propaganda efforts against the United Nations, Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd told a mass meeting of Boeing workers today.

A crowd of 4000 workers heard the famed Antarctic explorer, who is in the United States between active duty assignments overseas, assert that Japan has been predicting and depending on the wage troubles of the workers to flare into labor unrest.

The mass meeting was called by the district council of the Boeing Aircraft Workers' Union as a protest against the starting wage increase of 4½ cents an hour granted the workers by the War Labor Board last week. The council had predicted that between 15,000 and 40,000 workers would attend.

Admiral Byrd said: "We know from neutral countries that the Japs have been using their foreknowledge of the West Coast labor troubles as propaganda to influence neutral countries to fight with the Axis against us, on the ground that free people can't govern themselves properly or compete with the Axis in war because they are too individualistic and self-centered really to unite.

"I am as certain as I stand on this platform that you and all the rest of us will in the end prove these Jap war lords to be liars."

San Diego, Calif., March 7 (AP).—The A. F. L. Aeronautical Mechanics Lodge 1125, in a vote of acclamation at a mass meeting today, urged President Roosevelt to order the Army and Navy to "take over" the Consolidated Aircraft Corp. plant.

The meeting, attended by approximately 1000 union members, was called in protest against the War Labor Board aircraft wage decision granting 7½-cent-an-hour increases for half the 220,000 workers in southern California plane plants. The union claims membership of 35,000 in the San Diego bomber factory.

Mishawaka, Ind., March 7 (AP).—Members of Local 65, United Rubber Workers of America (C. I. O.) voted a strike against the Ball Band plant, a subsidiary of the United States Rubber Co., in a series of meetings here this afternoon.

The strike is scheduled to begin at midnight tonight. Three-fourths of the output of the plant is war work.

Gerald Nichels, a member of the union executive committee said the case was placed before the WLB on May 28, 1942.

Landlords Attack OPA Rent Control, Brown Reports

Price Administrator Prentiss M. Brown said yesterday that landlords are organizing a Nation-wide campaign against rent control.

He has been flooded particularly by letters from Detroit, supporting an appeal from certain interests for a change in rent regulations there, Brown said in a statement.

"It has been called to my attention," he added, "that recently the realtors' Washington committee of the National Association of Real Estate Boards through a circular letter to its local members launched an organized campaign on a Nation-wide scale to induce landlords to write to members of Congress, protesting against rent control. The increase in mail from Detroit to this office apparently is a part of this campaign."

Crockett, Writer, Died in Sinking

Cairo, March 5 (Delayed) (AP). Edward Henry Crockett, 31-year-old Associated Press correspondent whose death in the Mediterranean theater was announced February 5, was among victims of the sinking of the 2650-ton British mine-layer Welshman, naval quarters disclosed.

A destroyer picked up survivors, Crockett among them. Physicians worked for more than two hours in a vain effort to save his life but he died of exposure. He was buried at sea.

Litvinoff Gets Taylor Released

HOLLYWOOD'S Gregory Ratoff called on Soviet Ambassador Litvinoff the other day in connection with a film on Russia which he is directing. Ratoff complained that he had hoped to get Robert Taylor to play the leading role in the picture, but Taylor was now in the Navy.

"I don't understand this country," observed Litvinoff. "You take the men who can do most for morale and send them off to shoot a rifle. In my country we exempt leading actors from military service."

Whereupon the Russian Ambassador picked up the phone, called War Information Chief Elmer Davis. Davis, in turn, telephoned Secretary of the Navy Knox, who readily released Robert Taylor for the Russian picture.

This has brought to the front again the whole question of Hollywood draft deferments. In the last war, key actors were deferred on the ground that they were important for morale. Britain formerly called up movie actors, but has now realized its mistake and has decided to defer them. In the United States a start was made toward deferment; there was a certain amount of public resentment, several actors volunteered, and the whole thing has been in a jumble ever since.

Result is that the Army has a handful of soldiers who turn the troops into autograph seekers, while the country is minus stars who could do a great job for morale.

At present, for instance, the Army doesn't want Mickey Rooney, first because he is too short, second because he would disrupt any Army camp. Everybody would be watching him instead of the commanding officer. Likewise with Clark Gable. President Roosevelt himself wrote Gable a letter asking him not to enlist. Gable patriotically enlisted, however, and now is a bombadier. Only trouble is that a 53-year-old bombadier doesn't have the quick reflexes of a younger man and might endanger the entire crew of the bomber.

So the Army is up against what to do with patriot Clark Gable, and unofficially, they think he could do a better job entertaining troops via the screen in Hollywood.

The movie industry would like to see the whole question decided one way or the other by the Government. Then there would be no stigma on an actor for sticking to the job the knows best.

NOTE: General Eisenhower has just cabled from North Africa emphasizing the importance of motion pictures for morale building.

Darlan's Cease-Firing Order

A better idea of how many lives the deal with Admiral Darlan saved the U. S. Army can now be revealed.

Before the invasion of North Africa, the War Department made reservations in hospitals all along the East Coast of the United States for casualties expected from the invasion.

Officials figured the landing force would have help from General Giraud, but had not counted on Darlan's much more important cease-firing order. The full effect of that order was not realized until the casualties began to come back.

It was then discovered that the Army needed only one-eighth the hospital space which had been reserved.

Huey Long Tactics

There is more than meets the eye behind the opposition of Louisiana's shrewd, active-as-a-grasshopper Senator Ellender to the appointment of Texas' Judge Jimmy Allred to the Circuit Court of Appeals.

Senator Ellender, of course, wants Judge Archie Higgins of Louisiana appointed to the Court of Appeals instead of Allred, and there is a very good reason. Ellender, once the messenger boy of Huey Long, is planning to run for Governor of Louisiana next year. He wants to do a Huey Long and hold the two jobs of Governor and United States Senator for a brief period.

But there is one potential candidate who might stand in his way—Judge Higgins. Higgins, now on the State Supreme Court, is a popular figure in Louisiana and probably will run for Governor—if he doesn't land the United States Court of Appeals.

So Senator Ellender is moving heaven and earth to block the confirmation of Texas' Judge Allred, and put Higgins on the Circuit Court.

This is not the first time Ellender has pulled strong senatorial wires on judgeships. In 1940 he wanted his law partner, Adrian J. Caillouet made a United States district judge. But the Justice Department wanted to appoint Rene Viosca, who as United States District Attorney had done a superb job of jailing Governor Leche, Seymour Weiss and the old Huey Long gang.

Senator Ellender, however, was smart. He knew that Roosevelt needed votes badly to extend Cordell Hull's reciprocity treaties. The lineup in the Senate looked as if it would be about 42-42. So he held out his vote and that of his colleague, Senator Overton. They staged a sit-down strike until he got his law partner appointed to a United States judgeship—then he voted for Hull's trade treaties.

Today Ellender has the Louisiana congressional-delegation staging the same sort of a sit-down strike against all Roosevelt legislation—unless he gets Archie Higgins, his potential rival for Governor, appointed instead of Judge Allred to the Circuit Court.

Beef From Britain

When Ed Stettinius, grey-haired young lend-lease administrator, finished his testimony before the House Foreign Affairs Committee, Democratic and Republican members alike did an unusual thing. They gave him an ovation.

And in their final report the committee went further and wrote this tribute: "Mr. Stettinius has been helpful and forthright. The members of the committee have been highly impressed with his integrity and ability and feel that his selection as administrator of lend-lease has been a distinctly meritorious choice."

There were various reasons for this tribute.. One important reason was that Stettinius showed how lend-lease had worked both ways, how Britain was paying for the cost of our army in England, and how, although we shipped 18 million pounds of beef to Britain last year, we received 25 million pounds of beef from the British Empire—Australia and New Zealand.

That may be a good thing to remember when food is short and people are grousing about lend-lease.

Security Expansion Urged

Immediate expansion of our social security program would aid necessary postwar readjustment and reconstruction, Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins last night told an American Church Union Conference at St. Paul's Episcopal Church, 917 Twenty-third Street Northwest.

She is chairman of President Roosevelt's committee on economic security, and was chairman of the committee which made the report upon which the present Social Security law is based. Secretary Perkins and other interested Government agencies will soon recommend to the President plans for an expanded program.

This can provide protection to individuals and families against the loss of income which they may suffer for one reason or another after the war, when a decline from the high levels of wartime employment would greatly increase the incidence of risks leading to such losses, she declared.

Mme. Chiang Springs Batch Of $10 Words

By International News Service

Wellesley, Mass., March 7.—Mme. Chiang Kai-shek, whose vocabulary has continued to astound students of the English language, hauled out a new batch of $10 words today for the faculty and undergraduates of Wellesley College, her alma mater.

Some of the more unfamiliar words were indehiscence, Tartuffe, cenote, exegesis and epistemological.

A session with Webster's unabridged was in order, and showed the following:

Indehiscence is the state of being "closed at maturity." Mme. Chiang used the word in warning Wellesley girls that they must not close their minds to new things as they face the postwar future.

Tartuffe comes from the character "Tartuffe" in Molier's play of the same name. Tartuffe was a hypocritical religious devotee who in that guise swindled his benefactor. It has come down to be a synonym for hypocrite, and was used by China's First Lady when she declared the hypocrites and "mentally lackadaisical" of the world have had too great a share in nurturing the evils of our day.

Cenote, Webster says simply, is "a natural underground water reservoir." Mme. Chiang adapted the word in a reference to the reservoirs of learning available for those anxious to profit by the wisdom of the past.

Exegesis and epistemological are somewhat more familiar, but by no means common usage. An exegesis is a critical explanation, or explanatory note, while epistemological pertains to "the theory or science of the method and grounds of knowledge."

TRANSPORTING WAR WORKERS IS AN ESSENTIAL JOB

Transit Firms Here Held War Industries

. . . "the essentiality to the defense effort of the services rendered by the Capital Transit Co. can scarcely be disputed. Without transportation of Government war workers to and from their jobs, the entire defense program would be seriously hampered. This has become especially true since the rationing of tires and gasoline."

From an opinion by the office of the General Counsel of the War Manpower Commission.

Income taxes should be paid out of savings of current income, if possible. But if you have been unable to save up enough to pay your taxes and you expect to borrow now and repay from income, investigate Household's plan. No endorsers needed—no credit inquiries. If your tax is $200, you borrow $50 on March 15 and repay in 3 monthly installments of $17.34. Thus the loan cost is only $2.02.

UNITED'S

AUTO and Signature LOANS

The United Finance Company, affiliated with a nationally known finance institution is pleased to announce the opening of two new loan offices, conveniently located to serve you best. These offices are licensed and supervised for your protection by the Administrator of Loan Laws of Maryland. You are cordially invited to become acquainted with our friendly, fast, confidential service which has won thousands of friends over the years.

PAY DAY LOANS
$5 TO $50

A plan to help you when you need cash in a hurry. You can get $5 to $50 in just a few minutes. We try to make a loan to every worthy person. More than 90% of our signature loans are made without co-signers. It's easy to qualify. Your promise to pay is good enough for us. Other Signature Loans up to $300.

INCOME TAX LOANS*

If you've been unable to save enough to pay your taxes due March 15th, come in and see how easy it is to get the money you need. You can get $10 to $275, or more, and pay back in a year on easy terms to fit your income.

AUTO LOANS
$10 TO $300—QUICKLY

Cash on most any make or model car, in a few minutes. No red tape. No embarrassing investigations. Bring in the certificate of title of your car and get the whole amount in cash quickly. No deductions, penalties or wage assignments. Quick, confidential service.

GET OUT OF DEBT PLAN

In keeping with the Government's fight to control the cost of living, it is necessary that you pay your debts. Just make a list of your outstanding bills and bring to our office. Usually you can get all you need to pay them all off at one time. Then you only pay one payment at one place each month instead of scattered payments at different places. It's simple, quick, convenient. Come in today and see for yourself.

Remarkably Good Opportunity
4-Bedroom Colonial

This sort of a situation crops up only once in a long while. Circumstances compel owner to sell now. Owner will dispose of this property at a low dollar value, making allowance for necessary redecorating to be done. The house itself is a handsome center-hall brick Colonial, built by outstanding builder, and situated in a delightful wooded section of Chevy Chase, Md., close to Connecticut Avenue. The buyer who has been searching for a house that can be bought at a prewar price should immediately investigate this. We are not writing this advertisement in this manner as a "come on"—we mean business and so does the seller. For further details please call us today.

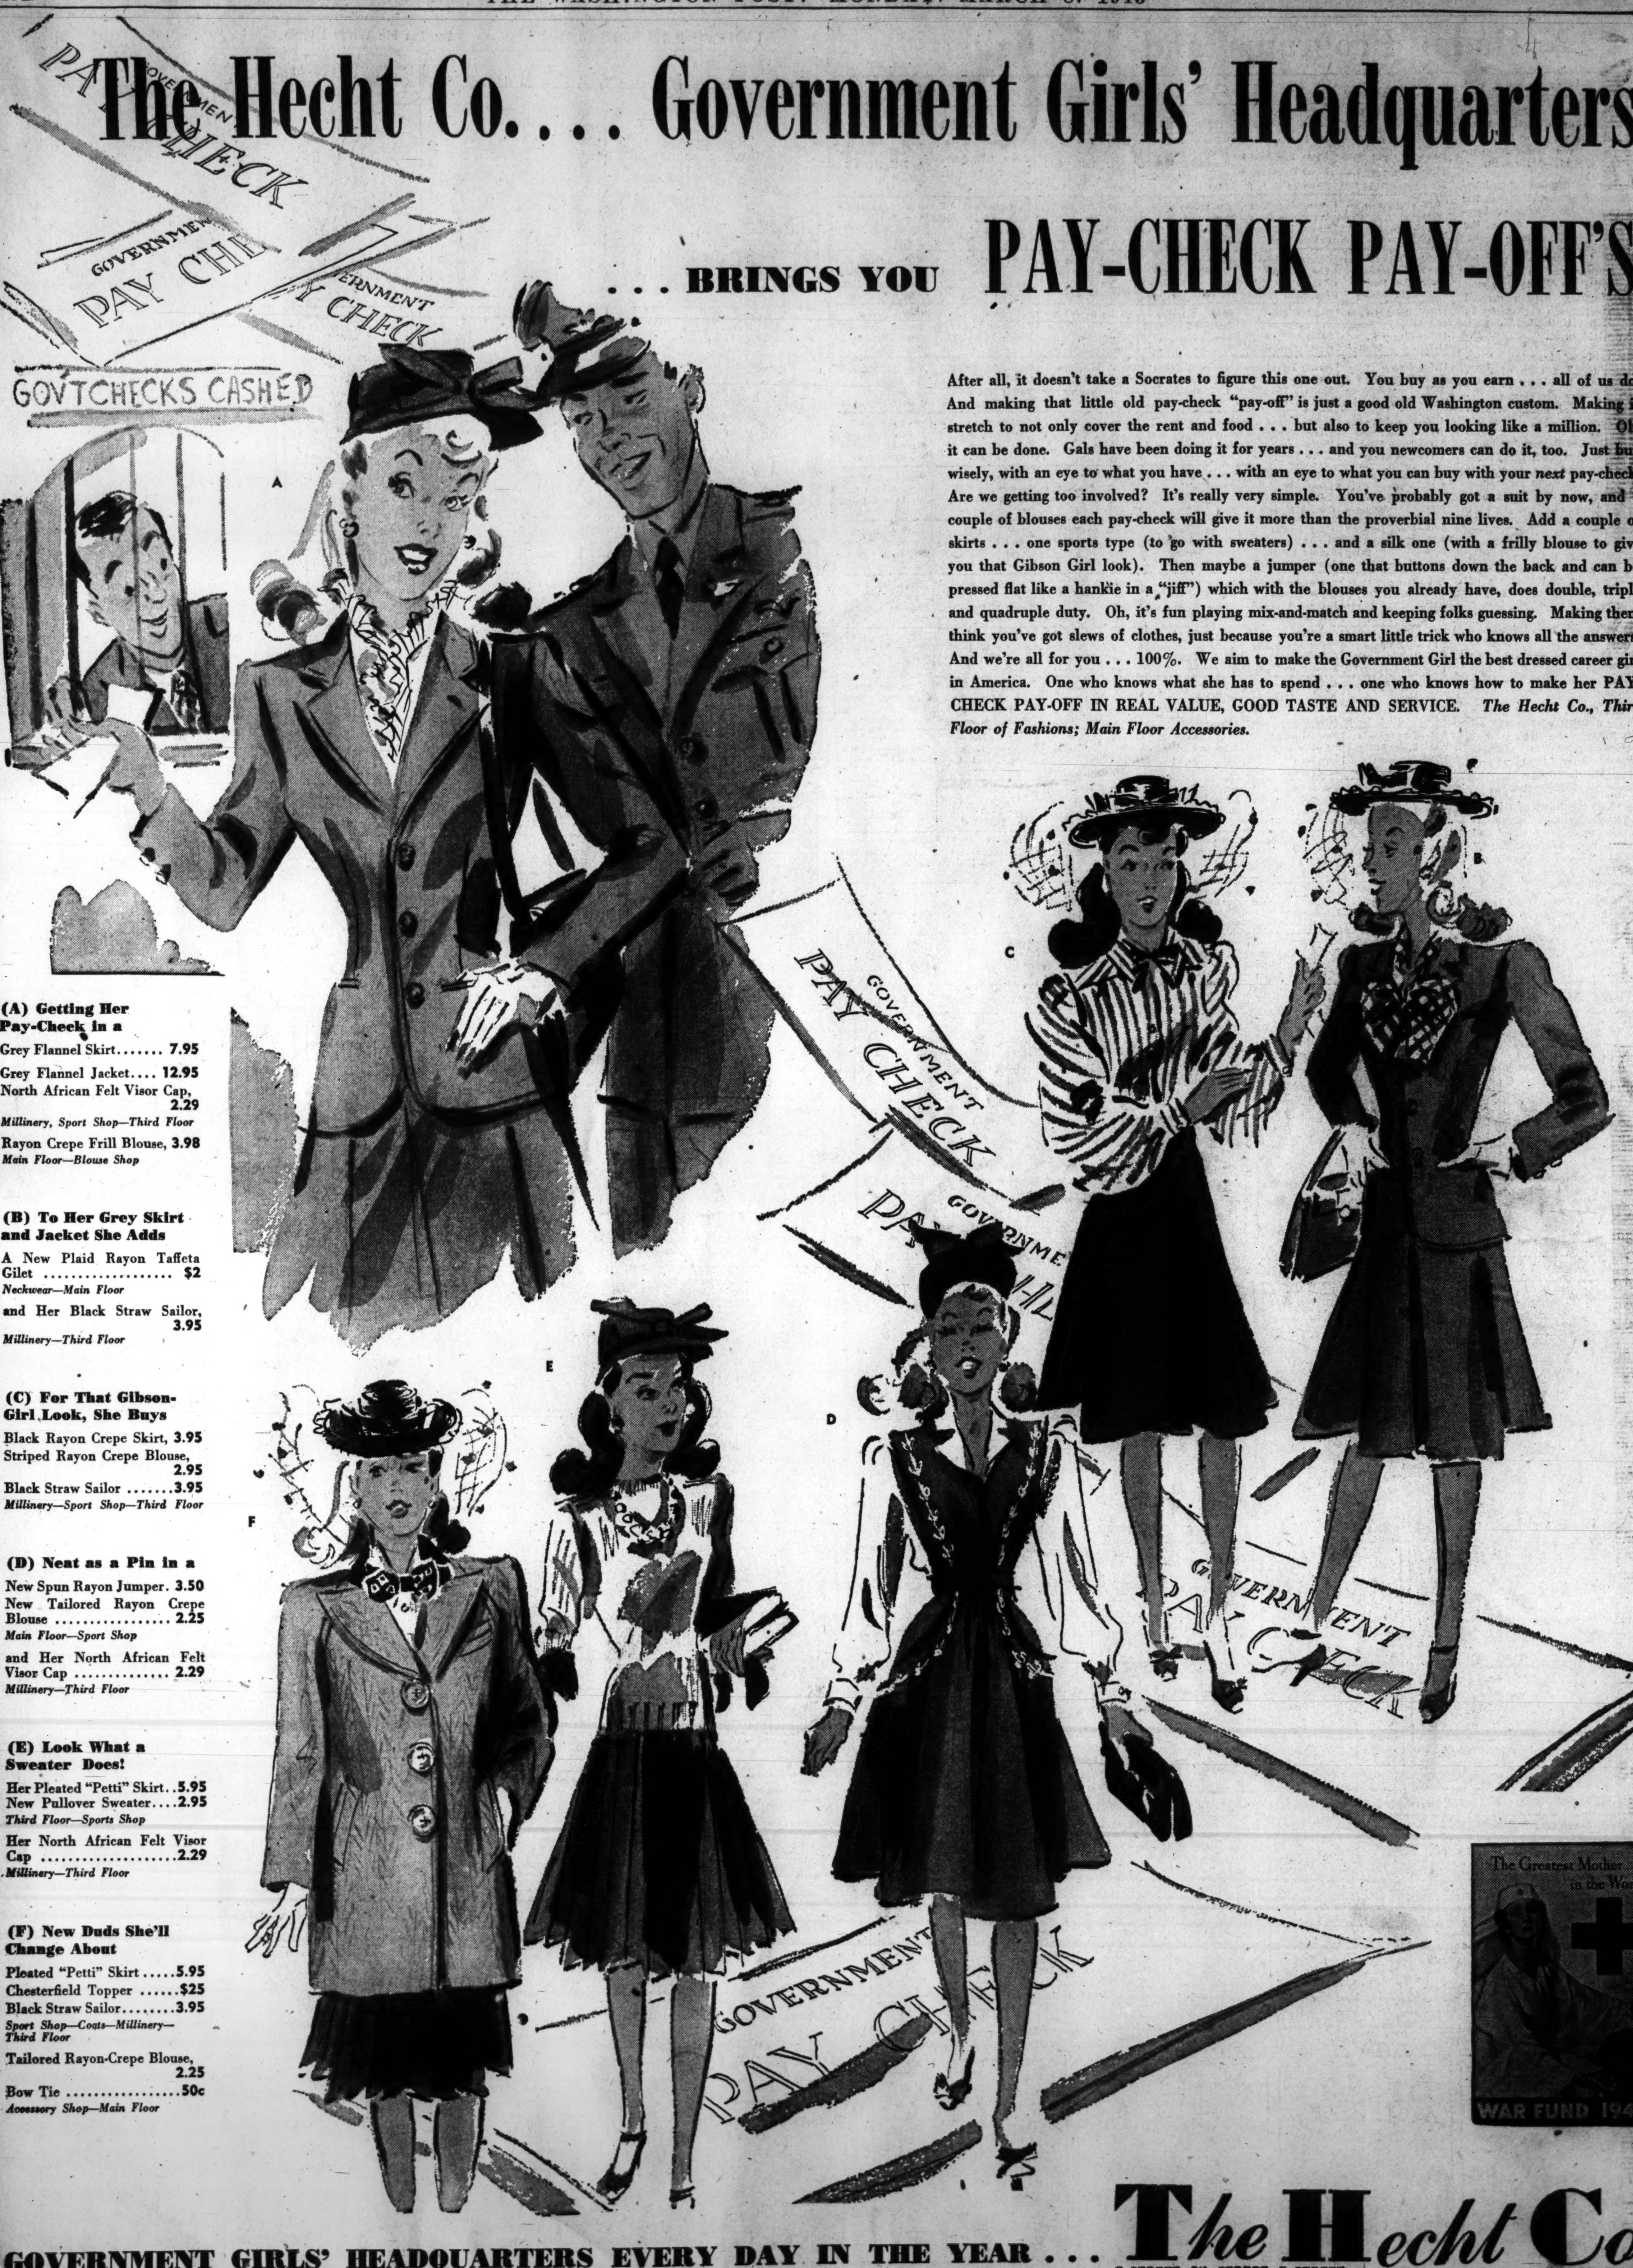
... BRINGS YOU PAY-CHECK PAY-OFF'S



After all, it doesn't take a Socrates to figure this one out. You buy as you earn . . . all of us do. And making that little old pay-check "pay-off" is just a good old Washington custom. Making it stretch to not only cover the rent and food . . . but also to keep you looking like a million. Oh, it can be done. Gals have been doing it for years . . . and you newcomers can do it, too. Just buy wisely, with an eye to what you have . . . with an eye to what you can buy with your next pay-check. Are we getting too involved? It's really very simple. You've probably got a suit by now, and a couple of blouses each pay-check will give it more than the proverbial nine lives. Add a couple of skirts . . . one sports type (to go with sweaters) . . . and a silk one (with a frilly blouse to give you that Gibson Girl look). Then maybe a jumper (one that buttons down the back and can be pressed flat like a hankie in a "jiff") which with the blouses you already have, does double, triple and quadruple duty. Oh, it's fun playing mix-and-match and keeping folks guessing. Making them think you've got slews of clothes, just because you're a smart little trick who knows all the answers. And we're all for you . . . 100%. We aim to make the Government Girl the best dressed career girl in America. One who knows what she has to spend . . . one who knows how to make her PAY-CHECK PAY-OFF IN REAL VALUE, GOOD TASTE AND SERVICE. The Hecht Co., Third Floor of Fashions; Main Floor Accessories.
